Rain Keeps Down Crowd As Capital Enjoys 4th

U. S. Must Defend Democracy, Barkley Tells Thousands at Monument Grounds

Washington tucked a new record for Fourth of July safety under its belt last night and then watched the 163d anniversary of American independence pass into history in a blaze of fireworks and oratory.

Thirty-five thousand citizens pushed their way to the Washington Monument and vicinity for the traditional spectacle of fireworks and to hear a defense of New Deal foreign policies and reforms by Alben W. Barkley, majority leader of the Senate.

Rain, which drenched the city during the afternoon and threatened to repeat the performance at night, forced cancellation or postponement of many community gatherings.

Small Crowd Present

Albert Clyde-Burton, assistant superintendent of National Capital Parks, blamed the weather for the relatively small crowd at the Monument, a gathering that in other years has passed the 100,000 mark. Clyde-Burton said the crowd was the smallest in history.

Barkley, veteran orator from Kentucky, gave the massed thousands the words of George Washington, the Nation's father, and Thomas Jefferson, author of its Declaration of Independence, to support a contention the United States should take an active part in the world struggle to preserve democracy.

"Washington did not believe that this Nation, even in its infancy, should or could encase itself within an impenetrable wall of isolation and take no part in the affairs of mankind," declared Barkley who faces one of the hardest fights of his career in defense of the Administration's neutrality program.

Co-operation Is Urged

Despite Washington's sanction of temporary alliances in his Farewell Address, Barkley said, "whenever the President of the United States, or the Secretary of State under any administration, seeks to co-operate with other nations . . . we are told that we are flouting the advice of the Father of His Country by conniving in some mysterious species of permanent alliance which will involve us in all the quarrels of other nations and destroy the fabric of our own independence."

Reverence for the utterances of the Nation's founders should not cause their statements to be interpreted to mean, Barkley said, "that America is a sandlot or that the United States constitute a huge ostrich whose anatomy can be concealed by a buried head.

"It does not mean that we are afraid to recognize the world-wide struggle to preserve what democracy we have been able thus far to obtain."

MacLeish Is Quoted

Democracy, the Senator observed, is a "way of life" which must be "defended always and everywhere, if it is not to be lost."

Barkley quoted from an "arresting and thoughtful" article by Archibald MacLeish, whose confirmation as the new Librarian of Congress the Senator supported, in which MacLeish predicted the downfall of "the status quo which the great corporations and the reactionary newspapers call democracy."

Observing Jefferson is frequently quoted as saying "that government is best which governs least," Barkley asserted those "who would chain each new generation to the hitching post of another century," seldom refer to Jefferson's statement "that all constitutions should be revised every 20 years, that no generation has a right to bind a living generation in the form of its laws or its constitution."

Safest 4th in Recent Years Brings District Few Injuries

City Escapes Traffic Deaths; Less Than Half a Dozen Badly Hurt By Fireworks But 50 Are Arrested

Thanks to an intensified safety campaign by police, District officials and civic-minded organizations, the Capital's celebration of the glorious Fourth was the safest and sanest of its recent history.

In a day of usual gruesome expectations, there were no deaths, less than half a dozen major fireworks casualties and a bare smattering of serious traffic accidents.

Despite the ban against fireworks and the campaign to leave home-made explosions alone in return for a safely conducted spectacle at the Monument Grounds, complaints of privately conducted pyrotechnics came so thick and fast that police gave up keeping records.

By midnight a compilation of police estimates indicated that well over 1,000 complaints had been received, and about 50 persons, mostly above 18 years of age, had been booked on charges of exploding firecrackers.

The most serious accident in the area surounding Washington sent Mary Hursey, 38, and Helen Palmer, 37, both colored, and both of Alexandria, to Casualty Hospital, each with a fractured left leg and concussion. The car in which they were passengers was parked on the Defense highway when it was struck and hurled 140 feet into a field. The driver of the colliding car left the scene of the accident and remains unidentified.

One Loses Finger

In an undetermined condition at Garfield Hospital was Kenneth Harris, 24, of Hyattsville, Md., who received head injuries as a result of an accident on Queen's Chapel road. Witnesses told police that the car carrying Harris crashed into a car parked on the roadside. They added that two men in the colliding car fled after vainly attempting to extract the unconscious form of Harris from the car.

Most serious fireworks injuries were those received by Louis Biggs, 36, of the 3200 block of Otis street, Mount Rainier, Md.; James Jenkins, colored, 30, of 1209 S street northwest, and Charles Kober, 15, of 903 Sixth street southwest.

Jenkins may lose an eye as the result of a firecracker tossed into the car he was driving at Fourteenth and T streets northwest, exploding in his face.

Biggs received severe abdominal lacerations when a firecracker set under a tin can drove the metal into his body.

Injured in other traffic accidents: Herbert Butler, colored, 2, of 1137 Seventh street northwest. The child

Business Moves Definitely Up, Hopkins Says

Gains Substantial In Last Six Weeks, Including Incomes

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins declared yesterday that business, which had dropped off slightly since the turn of the year, had moved definitely upward in the last six weeks.

"The evidence of better business has come from a wide range of industries," he said.

Recent gains, he added, have been substantial, representing a rebound to some extent from the industrial tie-up caused by the coal strike this spring.

Industrial production in June rose to the March level, thus wiping out the slight interim decline, which Hopkins blamed on "the coal tie-up and unsettled political conditions abroad."

Money Still Idle

He pointed out, at the same time, that business had shown no disposition as yet to use the large available volume of idle money for plant expansion and modernization. Security flotations, he said, have been mostly for refunding purposes.

The monthly rate of income payments, Hopkins said, rose in June, "canceling at least part of the April-May decline." Income payments for the first half of 1939 are estimated at approximately $65,600,000,000 as compared with a 1938 total of $64,200,000,000 and a 1937 total of $69,000,000,000.

Income Shows Gain

Hopkins emphasized that "real income"—that is, the relation between wage, salary and other payments and the price level—has increased this year. While dollar receipts have been higher, prices have been lower.

The country's export trade, Hopkins said, has been "relatively large," despite the European situation. This has been due partly to the armaments race, although improvement has occurred in some major foreign markets.

Lee to Press $350,000,000 Tenant Loans

Will Push Bill This Session in Addition To $500,000,000 Plan

By Felix Cotten

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, author of a $350,000,000 bill to help tenants buy farms, said yesterday that sponsors of this legislation would press for its enactment at this session even if President Roosevelt's lending program, which carries $500,000,000 for loans to tenants, is passed.

The result would be to boost to $890,000,000 credit advances to tenants authorized at this session of Congress to enable them to buy farms and otherwise become self-supporting. Congress has already voted $40,000,000 to be loaned to tenants by the Farm Security Administration.

The Lee bill, sponsored by 32 Senators, provides for insurance by the Government of farm mortgages up to 100 per cent or more of the appraised value of the farm. Cases where insurance would exceed 100 per cent would involve construction of new buildings and other improvements on farms, and inclusion of such costs in the principal of the mortgage.

The insured mortgages would bear 3 per cent and run for a maximum of 40 years.

Tenants able to make some kind of down payment would be on the preferred list. But, as a result of the insurance plan, tenants unable to make down payments could buy a piece of property, have new buildings and other improvements constructed on it, and start farming operations on their own.

The bill, however, is not limited to tenants. Anyone who owned no other property, except a house

King Buried Here, Gypsy Men Grow Mourning Beards

Royalty came to Washington again yesterday, but this time wrapped in the mantle of death, as Steve John, acknowledged king of more than 12,000 gypsies in the United States, was buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery by the side of his queen, Cuca, who died 15 years ago.

The body of the 83-year-old ruler was brought here from Madison, Wis., in a special train and laid out in the funeral parlor of Thomas B. Hanlon. He died last Friday.

Romany people from many States, garbed in their picturesque costumes, journeyed here to attend the leader's funeral.

He was buried with Roman Catholic rites.

Following gypsy custom, the king was buried with his personal effects. The men of the group temporarily quit shaving as a mark of respect to their chief, retaining their beards for a four-day period.

Bolt Kills Couple, Spares Their Baby

Bay City, Mich., July 4 (AP).—Lightning killed two bathers today but spared the life of the couple's infant son, carried in his father's arms.

Bernard C. Mayville, 26, and his wife, Alice, 26, were struck by the bolt. Mayville died instantly, his wife within a few minutes. The baby was not believed seriously hurt.

Blond Fascist Escapes France With Arms Secrets

Grenoble, France, July 4 (U.P.).—An Italian girl spy, described as a "strikingly beautiful blonde," escaped across the border today reportedly carrying a brief case filled with important military documents.

French counterespionage agents, who had laid an unsuccessful trap for the girl, immediately arrested another golden-haired girl and called in a number of officers of the Grenoble garrison for questioning.

The name of the arrested girl was not revealed but it was said she had been seen often in the company of the escaped spy who had been a friend and confidante of many of the French garrison officers.

Stands Collapse As Crowd Rises To Sing, 70 Hurt

Waukegan, Ill., July 4, (AP).—Seventy persons were injured, five seriously, tonight when wooden bleachers collapsed as 20,000 persons surged to their feet to sing the National Anthem at a Fourth of July celebration.

The bleachers gave way at the end of a public fireworks demonstration at the high school football grounds. The wooden seats cracked under the strain as the crowd rose to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Army Visions Defense of S. America

Johnson, Gen. Strong Reveal Plans to Protect Latins, at Virginia Institute

By Hedley Donovan.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 4.—Military operations on Latin-American soil were pictured here today as one of the most likely duties of the United States Army if a deepening world crisis directly involves this country.

"To maintain our freedom," Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson declared tonight before the Institute of Public Affairs, "we must be able to concentrate men, guns and planes at any vulnerable point in the three Americas, from Point Barrow to Tierra del Fuego."

Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, Assistant Chief of Staff, war plans division, asserted that "our initial effort may well be in the field of opposing non-American participation in the development of such a situation in Latin America as we have recently seen in Spain."

Sees 'Isms' Encroaching

In a frank exposition of calculations underlying army strategy, Gen. Strong indicated concern over "A continued and increasing stream of anti-American or anti-democratic propaganda from abroad; the economic penetration into Latin America from European and Oriental countries, whose policies are distinctly unfriendly to democracies, and the persistent effort to sow and foster the seeds of foreign 'isms' in our own and other countries of this hemisphere . . ."

Preparations to defend American freedom on land and sea and in the air are futile, Johnson warned, "if in the process of defeating an enemy, our country loses its Democratic liberties.

"Defense, in a democracy, means more than merely repelling an enemy attack," he said. "It means winning a war and at the same time preserving the fabric of democratic government set up by the Constitution."

European Invasion Possible

In a hypothetical picture of America at war, the sub-Cabinet officer saw:

Every able-bodied man, excluding a limited number of key-men in industry, "subject to the call of the Army and Navy."

"Perhaps every phase of civilian economic life" under government control.

"All controls affecting civilians administered by civilians."

Gen. Strong asserted that in preparing for a possible violation of the Monroe Doctrine, "it appears reasonable to visualize the following steps by one or more European powers:

"Open support of revolutionary movements designed to set up governments in the Western Hemisphere hostile to us or opposed to democratic principles.

"Movements of armed forces to this hemisphere," this last step becoming feasible "only when the situation in Europe is such as to

Roosevelt Asks Action On Neutrality; Senators Decide Its Fate Today

Senate to Vote at 5 On Money Powers; Decisions May Shape Course of Session

By Robert C. Albright

Two significant decisions that may determine the course of the session will be made in the Senate today as the Foreign Relations Committee grapples with the neutrality issue and the Senate rides to a vote on the President's money powers.

Meeting in executive session, the Foreign Relations Committee will take its first look at the emasculated House neutrality bill and determine whether to proceed with this and a dozen other varied neutrality measures pending before it.

And promptly at 5 p. m. the Senate will vote up or down a monetary conference report giving the President power to further devalue the dollar, increasing the domestic silver purchase price to 71.11 cents, renewing foreign purchase of silver and reviving the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Returned from Hyde Park to maintain closest contact with both situations, the President is expected to consult Congressional leaders this morning and reaffirm his view that war-preventative neutrality action this session is urgently needed.

Not Formally Before Senators

President Roosevelt at Hyde Park and Senate Majority Leader Barkley at the Capitol yesterday set at rest reports that the Administration might willingly assent to laying aside the neutrality measure in the Senate to make for a speedy adjournment.

Asked if there was any plan to postpone until next session action on the $3,880,000,000 lending program as well as the neutrality measure, Barkley said he knew of none.

"I know that the President is very anxious for both," said Barkley.

The House neutrality bill, retaining a modified arms embargo despite Administration requests for complete repeal, will not be formally before the Foreign Relations Committee when it meets this morning, as it has not yet been messaged from the House. But copies of the House revision have been printed and will be supplied every member of the committee.

Unusual Course Unlikely

First Senate committee neutrality test, that will signal either a tug of war lasting well into the session or a quick sidetracking, leading to adjournment, will come on the question of whether or not to proceed with consideration of the question. Although sharply divided on the precise legislation needed, a majority of the committee was believed favorable toward neutrality action in some form this session.

If a majority agrees to go forward, next decision must be made on procedure—whether to use the House bill as a working base for committee amendments or a Senate bill such as the Pittman measure discontinuing the arms embargo, or to start from scratch. In view of the plethora of individual plans, protracted consideration lasting many days or even weeks would follow.

Although the House bill might be called up in the Senate without going to committee, this rare course appeared unlikely and would be regarded as a slap at the committee. Should a committee deadlock ensue, a discharge motion could be offered to force Senate action, but this unusual course also appeared unlikely. Main concession sought by Admin-

London, Paris May Ask Hitler For Pledge

Want Assurances Against Military Action at Danzig

By International News Service.

London, July 4.—Great Britain and France tonight considered the possibility of dispatching formal notes to Reichsfuehrer Hitler asking the Nazi Fuehrer's assurances that Germany will make no attempt to change the status of the Free City of Danzig by military action or without a negotiated agreement.

The notes may ask also der Fuehrer's personal assurances that Danzig will not be militarized, as such action would automatically violate the League of Nations rules governing the port city.

While the notes, as considered today by the foreign affairs committee of the British cabinet, would not suggest a solution to the critical Danzig situation, the mere fact of their sending would be tantamount to a strong Anglo-French warning against violent action in Danzig by the Nazi Reich.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Prime Minister Chamberlain may deliver a statement of vital importance before the House of Commons tomorrow regarding the proposed Anglo-French-Russian pact against

Japanese Army Opposes Cabinet Over Axis Tie

Tokyo (Wednesday), July 5 (U.P.). The Japanese army, advocate of firm measures in international affairs, is planning an effort to oust the cabinet of Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma unless the government reconsiders its decision against an outright military alliance with Germany and Italy, it was learned authoritatively today.

The army's determination in this matter coincides with the strong stand military leaders have taken in the Tientsin dispute with Great Britain.

Administration Policy Is to Prevent Any War Anywhere, President Declares

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 4.—President Roosevelt said at a press conference today he wanted action on neutrality legislation at this session of Congress with the objective of preventing war.

The policy of the Administration—the first policy—Mr. Roosevelt said, is to prevent any war in any part of the world because anything that can be done to stop war is good.

The President left here at 11 p. m. E. S. T., on an overnight train trip to Washington, after bidding goodbye to his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, who sails for Europe Thursday.

The President's mother gave him a farewell kiss at the station and told those accompanying Mr. Roosevelt:

"Take care of my son while I'm abroad."

Secretary Morgenthau, who lives nearby, also boarded the President's train for the ride to the Capital.

At his press conference the President made clear he was supporting Secretary Hull's position the arms embargo section of the present neutrality law should be scrapped.

In Bloom Bill

Hull's proposals, including abolition of the arms embargo, were incorporated in the Bloom bill in the House, but a coalition of Republicans and Democrats overrode Administration leaders last Friday and wrote in a modified arms embargo provision before passing the measure.

Mr. Roosevelt asserted press dispatches from four major capitals, stating the House action had been welcomed in fascist and nazi nations, were substantiated by reports to the State Department.

He indicated he believed the action had an unfavorable effect on the current European crisis, might bring war closer and would make it more difficult for this country to keep from being embroiled.

Wants Committee to Act

Sitting in shirt sleeves at a table on the lawn of Mrs. Roosevelt's cottage on the family estate, where a Fourth of July picnic had been given for nearly 80 guests, the President said that in the interest of preventing war, he wanted the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to go ahead with consideration of the neutrality issue.

Asked whether he wanted the committee to use the original Bloom bill as the basis for its study, Mr. Roosevelt suggested sticking to objectives rather than details. Objectives should be stressed, he said, because they can be attained by changing a few words.

A reporter remarked some Senators had said they would discuss neutrality until September if that were necessary to assure retention of an arms embargo. That is entirely up to them, the Chief Executive asserted.

Mr. Roosevelt said he would confer with Secretary Hull tomorrow, but that there was no news in that since he always saw the Secretary immediately on returning to the Capital from a trip.

He said he had not determined whether he would confer with Congressional leaders.

Morgenthau at Picnic

He said he had not been in touch with the Treasury on monetary problems and had not talked officially with Secretary Morgenthau—one of the picnickers—since last Friday. He pointed to the Secretary, who had stopped taking pictures of the conference, and said Morgenthau was holding up his hand to attest the truth of the statement.

A newsman wanted to know whether the President was going to

Rep. Griswold, of Wisconsin, Dies at Wheel of His Auto

Representative Harry W. Griswold (Republican), of Wisconsin, died of a heart attack at the wheel of his automobile on Spring road near Sixteenth street northwest at 4:20 p. m. yesterday.

Mrs. Griswold was with her husband and waited with the body until it was removed nearly an hour and a half later. She was hysterical until soothed by her daughter, Mary.

Mrs. Griswold told the coroner her husband felt well yesterday morning, ate breakfast and dinner as usual and went for a walk in the afternoon. Later they went for a drive and rode nearly an hour.

"As we turned from Sixteenth street into Spring road," she said, "the car hit the curb. I asked what was the matter. Instead of answering, Mr. Griswold threw off his hat and crumpled up on my shoulder. I called for help."

Dr. Vasilios Lambros, of Emergency Hospital, pronounced Mr. Griswold dead at 4:40 p. m.

Mrs. Griswold called on Representative John C. Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, for aid and Mrs. Schafer notified the Lee Funeral Home, which immediately obtained a removal permit from Coroner McDonald.

Police offered to take Mr. Griswold to a nearby funeral home, but his wife insisted on the body remaining at the scene until Representative and Mrs. Schafer arrived.

The Declaration of Independence, looked at in its Congressional Library shrine with openly covetous eyes by the National Archives, was on display yesterday for the first July 4 in 15 years. Library employes agreed to keep the building open.

U. S. 'Big Bertha' Radio Ready To Fight Fascist Propaganda

By the Associated Press.

Schenectady, N. Y., July 4.—United States engineers readied today a short wave "Big Bertha" for action against Germany and Italy in the "war" for control of the South America radio lanes.

The "Big Bertha," this country's first 100 kilowatt short wave station, is the brain child of researchers at General Electric Company, a short wave pioneer.

Scheduled for use almost a year ago, the giant station was torn down and rebuilt to eliminate tube defects and will be ready to fire a verbal "news barrage" at Fascist propaganda within two weeks, engineers predicted.

Recently an increase in power by a German government station "blanketed" some of the two Schenectady stations' Latin American broadcasts, but the "Big Bertha" will set the pace for a new American ether offensive.

Because of its great mixture of nationalities, the Southern continent is fertile ground for "'ism' sowing" and the chief battle ground in the world short wave "war," it was pointed out.

Lined up side by side in the combat are the major American short wave o[illegible] including General Electric, Westinghouse, National Broadcasting Co., Columbia Broadcasting and Wide World (Rockefeller Foundation) and Great

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

NARROW ESCAPE: Apparently the families who live in 7 to 12 room houses—the "middle income" or well-to-do group—have another year's respite from almost inevitable higher income taxes. But they'll be lucky to weather another session of Congress without having their income taxes well-nigh doubled.

U. & U.

Sen. Tydings . . . changed mind

* * * *

There seems to be a little mystery and comical pussyfooting about this, instead of candor. All the talk is about "broadening the income tax base." But the small sums that can be collected from the $2,000-$3,000 levels are negligible, compared with the many millions of additional taxes Senator La Follette urges for the $3,000 to $50,000-a-year group.

* * * *

They escaped this year by the skin of their teeth. The vote lost by a tie—38 to 38—when Senator Tydings became the middle-class hero by changing his vote with 20 Senators not voting. Next year—barring the exigencies of an election year—they may not be so lucky. They can console themselves, as patriots, that they'll have the first whack at helping balance the budget.

"—two kinds of politicians"

Two of the commonest butts of jokes in the Capital reside at opposite extremes of both the political zoo and Pennsylvania avenue . . . They are the Members of Congress, in their mythical campaign hats, and the suave wonder boys of the State Dept. in their striped pants. Neither species of joke stands up under realistic inspection.

* * * *

Both groups are simon-pure politicians, in their own sectors.

The Congressmen try to project the fluctuating will of the people; the diplomats practice international politics rather expertly, under somewhat less pressure from their constituents, with international amenities requiring a velvet glove over the hand of steel.

* * * *

But often, in the nineteenth century calm of their high-ceilinged offices, they talk turkey off the record with the agents of foreign governments, whom they've learned to know well enough over the 5 o'clock highballs; talk in the forthright manner of Ben Franklin, Pinckney, John Hay and Stimson. After a chat with Sumner Welles, the Undersecretary, a foreign envoy is apt to feel slightly dazed.

Between the gallused politicians on the Hill and their striped-pants colleagues in the pillared fortress of foreign policy, Cordell Hull, once a Representative, Senator and whittling politician himself, forms an admirable link in these days when foreign policy means bread and butter. It's a tragic mistake to regard Congress and the State Dept. as adversaries.

To illustrate the compelixity of government these days, I cite three little noticed developments of the last year.

1. There's a movement in the State of Washington to establish a State monopoly for the wholesale distribution of oil and gasoline. There's even talk of barter deals between the State of Washington and the government of Mexico.

Should a State undertake such an experiment? Is it legal?

* * * *

2. Southern warehouse men who store the 600,000 bales of cotton recently bartered to England for rubber are rebellious at relinquishing the bales and the storage fees . . . Like other Americans, they begin to feel a vested interest . . . "Take the bales elsewhere," they say.

If you were an official or a Congressman, what would you tell 'em?

* * * *

3. So many tourists have been bringing in $100 worth of stuff (blankets, perfumes, liquor, jewelry, woolen, cigars) duty free across the Canadian and Mexican borders, sometimes several times a day, that there's a law authorizing the Government to require a stay up to 48 hours across the line before a visitor becomes a tourist and thus entitled to $100 worth duty free.

How would you decide whether it takes 2, 12, 24 or 48 hours for a traveler to become a tourist, at El Paso, Windsor, Tiajuana, Roush's Point?

All in a Congressman's or bureaucrat's day.

Bullitt Unveils Freneh Plaque

Chalons-Sur-Marne, France, July 4 (AP).—United States Ambassador Bullitt declared today that the American and French peoples believe "human beings are ends in themselves, and not instruments to be employed by the will of a powerful individual."

Bullitt spoke at the unveiling of a plaque in the city hall commemorating the selection here in 1921 of the Unknown Soldier who now lies in Arlington Cemetery.

"In honoring the Unknown Soldier," Bullitt said, "We honor not a man or even a race of men, but humanity. . . . All the propaganda in the world will never wash white again the hands or the soul of a man who wills in evil to fill the earth with unknown soldiers."

Economy Bloc Leader Backs Lending Plan

Senator Adams Gives Surprise Support to President's Proposal

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's proposed $3,860,000,000 lending program to spur business won unexpected support yesterday from Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, a leader of the Senate economy bloc, on the eve of its introduction in Congress.

Declaring that he was "in sympathy with the formula" outlined by the President to put large sums in the channels of trade, Adams said he would lend his support to proposals for bona fide self-liquidating projects.

"I have always been an advocate of constructing self-liquidating projects," Adams said, "But I want them to be actually self-liquidating — projects which will provide jobs for the unemployed and at the same time offer a reasonable guarantee that the Government will get its money back."

In a letter to Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, two weeks ago, the President outlined a program of loans for the purchase and leasing of railroad equipment, construction of toll highways, housing activities, expansion of the farm tenancy program and financing of exports through loans to foreign governments.

Better Than Gift, He Says

Adams, who has been sharply critical of past Administration spending programs, said he thought the investment of Federal funds in self-liquidating projects would be "much better than giving the money away, as has been done in the past."

He said the proposal that the Government purchase railroad equipment and lease it to the railroads appealed to him much more than attempts to refinance the railroads through purchase of their bonds, as has been done in some cases.

"If a railroad can't pay for the equipment that has been leased or sold to it, the Government at least can get the equipment back and sell or lease it to some other railroad, whereas it probably would lose all of its investment in bonds," Adams said.

Legislation to carry out the President's program is expected to be introduced in both houses this week, Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, expects to put it in the Senate mill where it will be sent to the Banking Committee, headed by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York.

Ban on Foreign Loans

Adams, a member of the committee, said he would seek to have the group write into the legislation a definite prohibition against the making of loans to foreign governments. The President suggested that $200,000,000 be made available next year and $300,000,000 the following year for this purpose.

This phase of the program already has provoked much criticism.

Senator Wagner, however, has defended the proposal that the Export-Import bank be empowered to carry out this enlarged program, contending that such loans would provide for badly needed financing of exports.

With their attack focused on this portion of the lending proposals, Senate Republicans said they were prepared to fight enactment of the legislation at this session. Their hopes of preventing final passage were heightened by reports that Vice President Garner is opposed to some parts of the program.

PWA Funds Sought

Advocates of a new PWA construction program, denied further funds when the relief bill was passed by Congress last week, expected to obtain at least a portion of their objective in the new legislation.

The President suggested that $150,000,000 be made available for self-liquidating, non-Federal public works projects, with $200,000,000 to be made available the following year.

These loans would be made at low interest rates, somewhere between 2 and 3 per cent, and would cover the full cost of the project. Administration leaders have figured that such loans would be equal to a 15 per cent grant to the local sponsor over the long-term life of the loan, because of the low interest rates.

Whether they would be acceptable to cities, counties and states which have been obtaining 45 per cent grants from the PWA, however, was a question leaders did not undertake to answer.

Churchill Boom For Post in Cabinet Grows

London, July 4.—The popular demand that Prime Minister Chamberlain make a place in his government for Winston Churchill, Britain's "elder statesman," gained momentum swiftly today.

Several influential newspapers, including the Daily Telegraph, the Daily Mail, the Manchester Guardian and the Yorkshire Post have taken up the cry for Churchill.

The Daily Mail will say tomorrow that Churchill's early appointing as first lord of the admiralty is now certain." According to this newspaper, Lord Runciman, the present lord president of the council, will resign; Lord Stanhope, now first lord of the admiralty, will be shifted to his post, and Churchill will succeed Lord Stanhope.

The Manchester Guardian, however, charges Chamberlain is reluctant to take Churchill, a dissident Conservative and first lord of the admiralty at the outbreak of the World War, into the cabinet because he realizes that Churchill's influence "might soon rival that of the prime minister."

President to Push Neutrality Fight

press for new monetary legislation. The Chief Executive replied with questions. He asked what was the matter with the money legislation now in the works, and wasn't the questioner a bit previous.

Key Administration monetary powers, including the President's dollar devaluation power and the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and right to buy foreign silver, expired at midnight Friday after Senators had filibustered a compromise measure to extend them.

A Senate vote on the compromise is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon. Attorney General Murphy has held acceptance of the legislation would revive the powers. A number of Senators have taken issue with Murphy's opinion, however.

Asked where, in his opinion, was the $2,000,000,000 which was in the stabilization fund, Mr. Roosevelt declared it was in suspense.

He asked his listeners whether they had ever seen a seance in which a body rises and is suspended in midair.

Turning to another subject, the President labeled as crazy reports from Washington of rumors he was planning a trip to speak against certain Congressional opponents.

The story linked the rumors with a radio appeal for a third term by Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and the possibility Congressional rebellions on the neutrality and monetary bills had strengthened the chances the President would seek another term.

Mr. Roosevelt said he might almost add that it was a typical Washington dateline story.

The President, who has been spending three days with his mother here before she sails Thursday for Europe, said he expected to return to Hyde Park from time to time until he begins a trip to the West Coast and Alaska.

'Big Bertha' Radio Station Ready

Britain's B. B. C.

In the opposing camp are the government subsidized broadcasting stations of Germany, Italy and Japan. (Russia, a competitor on the European Continent, is a negligible factor in South America.)

"All types of programs are broadcast," a short-wave station executive explained, "but news is the most important factor to South American listeners.

The official, who asked that his name be withheld, said Germany and Italian broadcasters placed tremendous stress on the "news" angle, but apparently had been hoist by their own petard in their eagerness to "sell the Fascist viewpoint," judging by the thousands of letters received from South America.

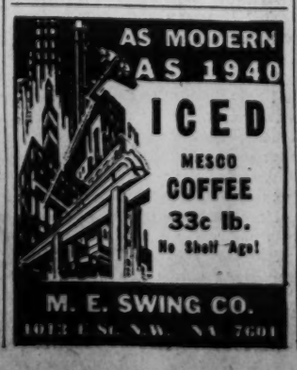
From quake-ridden Santiago, Chile, came this letter which read in part: "Station W2XAF (Schenectady) is considered a semiofficial news bureau here, inasmuch as when we do not hear it we ignore the news, particularly the foreign news."

Foreign language experts and South American-born announcers work in shifts to translate the news into Spanish and Portuguese as impartially as it is presented in this country on long-wave.

"We tell the truth even if it hurts," the short-wave executive said.

In broadcasting to Europe, American short-wave stations encounter formidable "defense weapons."

During a recent Russian spy case, listeners abroad reported that every time American short-wave newscasters offered bulletins on the case "a mysterious roar of interference" drowned out the announcer's voice. The noise ceased when the item ended. A similar roar was reported during announcements concerning German news.



Senate to Vote Today on Money

istration forces at this morning's session is a decision to go ahead with neutrality legislation, and the fight to improve on the mutilated House bill will come later.

The Senate meanwhile, meeting at 11 a. m., will debate for six hours the money bill conference report it blocked in last Friday's all-night session, and will then proceed to a vote. Leaders of both Administration and opposition groups worked through the Fourth canvassing strength. A decisive number of votes were still reported noncommitted, and although the outcome appeared close, a swing of the noncommittal group either way might bring victory or defeat by a good margin.

A small bloc of silver Senators still opposing the conference agreement is expected to launch a plea at the outset that their silver colleagues have nothing to lose and everything to gain by returning to the opposition forces. They will argue that if the measure is returned to conference, 71.11 cents an ounce would be the minimum won for domestic silver purchase while maximum demands of 77.57 cents might be met.

G. O. P. to Renew Attack

Republicans, holding almost as a unit against the conference agreement, are expected to renew their attack on the legality of any action on the conference report four days after the powers it was meant to continue have lapsed. They will urge entirely new legislation, or a simple resolution merely continuing the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Originally, silver Senators solidly voted with Republicans to withdraw dollar devaluation powers in return for Republican votes for 77.57 cent domestic silver. But the conference agreement continuing devaluation and "compromising" on 71.11-cent silver made inroads on this coalition and left today's vote in doubt.

Treasury spokesmen meantime are expected to issue today a statement clarifying the Administration's attitude on the monetary situation, and supplying up to date information on the price of silver mined in this country, the price paid and contemplated for foreign silver, operations of the stabilization fund, and the price of gold. Officials would not say in advance precisely what the statement will contain, but it is expected before the Senate votes on the money question at 5 p. m.

Growth of State Trade Barriers Halted, Says Study

Gradual elimination of interstate trade barriers, which have limited distribution and raised costs of food products, was noted yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

More than a dozen State Legislatures, at their 1939 sessions, rejected such bills, and some lowered or repealed existing barrier laws, with only a few States enacting new legislation of this type, the bureau announced.

Bureau officials pointed out that hundreds of "barrier laws" are still on the books, but added that "the record of the past year indicates there has been a halt in the alarming growth of interstate trade interference."

Hope was expressed, in a statement by the bureau, that in 1941, when most State Legislatures meet again, many of the existing interstate barriers will be removed.

Adherents See Drive to Wreck Wage-Hour Act

Letters to Congress Attack Lobbyists for Plan to Scuttle Law

Adherents of the wage-hour law moved on Congress yesterday to prevent either its revision or an investigation of its administration.

A letter was addressed to members of the Senate and House signed by "the emergency committee for preserving the fair labor standards act," setting forth the purposes for which the committee was created and the "concern" of the members over the threat to the legislation.

Already before the House is the Norton bill, carrying a number of interpretative amendments sponsored by Administrator Elmer F. Andrews.

Measure on Calendar

Twice the House has served notice on its Labor Committee, which reported the amendments, that it would not consider the Norton bill under suspension of rules, which would prevent additional change.

And twice Representative Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the labor group, has insisted the House should take the limited amendments as approved by the Administration or the act would remain as it is.

However, opponents of the law have declined to permit Representative Norton to recall her bill and the measure is on the calendar subject to being brought up under special rule. Majority members of the Rules Committee have indicated they will approve such a procedure.

Lobbyists Are Blamed

"Recent developments and current legislative maneuvers," said the letter sent to members of Congress by Nina P. Collier, secretary of the committee, "leave no room to doubt that the old enemies of the wages and hours act are determined, if at all possible, to scuttle this act, and ruin it by amendment or investigation.

"The same powerful lobbyists who continuously fought the bill before enactment are now seeking to make new alliances and under the guise of clarifying amendments to exclude members of sweated industries."

Members of the "emergency committee" include: Father R. A. McGowan, National Catholic Welfare Conference; Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Rabbi Barnett Brinckner, Elizabeth Christman, National Women's Trade Union League; W. D. Johnson, Railway Labor Executives Association; Gardner Jackson, Labor's Non-Partisan League; James McNamara, Hotel and Restaurant Employes (A. F. of L.); Donald Henderson, United Cannery Workers (C. I. O.); Charles H. Chase, American Association for Economic Freedom; Daniel Drieshen, American Communications Association; John P. Davis, National Negro Conference; Marion Bachrach, Commonwealth Federation; Mildred Riemer, American League for Peace and Democracy; Leo Goodman, United Shoe Workers (C. I. O.); and John J. Abt, Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Only Brave Are Free, Says White

Kansas City, July 4 (AP).—William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., editor, reminded Americans today this is a land "where to be brave we must be free, where the free must be ever brave."

Speaking o na Nation-wide broadcast of a special Independence Day program sponsored by the Council Against Intolerance in America, White said, "Our Constitution is the wisest document that man ever penned.

"How quickly would it crumble into dust if the guarantees of freedom should go—those blessings of liberty which rose out of the Declaration of Independence and were written indelibly in the Bill of Rights."

The Gallup Poll

Republican Voters Think Party Has Better Chance in 1940 With Liberal Candidate

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, July 4.—The dominant pull of sentiment among the rank and file of Republican voters today is toward the liberal rather than the conservative side, and a large majority of the party voters believe the G. O. P. has a better chance of winning in 1940 with a liberal candidate and a progressive platform than with a conservative candidate.

GEORGE GALLUP

These are the indications in a national study among Republican voters completed by the Institute. Using sampling methods which have proved accurate in two national elections, and more than 50 State and local elections in the last four years, the Institute put the following two issues to a cross-section of Republican voters in every State:

"Do you think the Republican party should be more liberal or more conservative than it was in the 1936 presidential campaign?"

More Liberal	55%
More Conservative	17%
About the Same	28%

"Do you think the Republican party has a better chance or a worse chance of winning in 1940, if it nominates a liberal candidate and adopts a liberal platform?"

Better Chance	77%
Worse Chance	14%
Makes no Difference	9%

The significance of this sentiment within the rank and file of the party is two-fold. First it indicates that Republican candidates of a liberal turn of mind are likely to go into the G. O. P. convention next year with more popular support than conservative candidates. Second, it shows that the rank and file do not at the present time agree with those Republican Party leaders who think the G. O. P. should establish itself as the party of out-and-out conservatism categorically opposed to the New Deal and all its reforms. Instead, they appear to agree with the viewpoint recently expressed by both Senator Borah and Alfred M. Landon that the party should avoid an ultra-conservative attitude.

The desire of the Republican rank-and-file to liberalize the party is not new. Institute surveys a year and a half ago found the same sentiment existing. In December, 1937, for example, nearly half of Republican voters (47 per cent) wanted the party to become more liberal than it had been in the 1936 campaign.

Among the rank and file of the Democratic Party, on the other hand, previous surveys have found a tendency to move in the opposite direction—toward the conservative side. Although the largest group think the policies of the New Deal should be continued pretty much along present lines, nevertheless the number who think the Administration should be more conservative is far greater than the number who think it should be more liberal.

Thus the situation seems to be that a majority of Republican voters think their party should move more toward the left, while among Democratic voters there is a growing tendency to move toward the right.

In the light of these tendencies it is important to know how the voters of the two parties classify some of the leading presidential candidates. Are Thomas E. Dewey, Senator Vandenberg and Senator Taft—to name a few of the leading G. O. P. contenders—regarded by the voters as conservative or liberal? How do the people rank Vice President Garner, Secretary Hull, Harry Hopkins?

The Institute is now completing a survey which answers these questions. The results will be published in The Post next Sunday.

Party Gets Entree To Battleship

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt's camera proved to be an open sesame for son Jimmy Roosevelt and his friends aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma.

Young Roosevelt, now a firm executive, approached the battleship, temporarily anchored here, in his 45-foot cruiser Half Moon Sunday. Visitors on the Oklahoma said today that a sailor ordered the private craft away, but the Half Moon came closer, pulled alongside and made fast.

A member of the Roosevelt party started up the ladder with camera in hand. He was immediately stopped and ordered to surrender the camera.

"But this is the President's camera," the member said.

Capper Hits Foreign 'Isms' In 4th Speech

Oldest Inhabitants Hear Kansan at 73d Independence Meeting

Considering it was the Fourth of July, it was very quiet. A small boy, down a side street, blew a few hesitant notes on a bugle, and even that sound, after a moment, faded into a dun-colored echo in the distance.

In the deserted basement of the Old Union Engine House at Nineteenth and H streets northwest, years of dust settled unregarded on Columbia Engine with its tarnished boiler, its empty shafts. Once as noisy a fellow as ever roared with four white horses to a blaze, it had been "let out to pasture." Its steel teeth chewed at the thin oats of memory.

Ten-thirty o'clock came with no particular fanfare. Only the old men climbing the iron steps to the room upstairs, consulted their watches, gossiped among themselves, cleared their throats. The Association of Oldest Inhabitants was celebrating the Fourth of July for the seventy-third time—since 1866. Firecrackers and flagwaving—who was interested in that?

At the roll-top desk at the front of the room, John R. Mahoney, financial secretary of the organization for the past 28 years, went over his reports to be sure they were correct. From time to time he fanned himself. The sun, shifting over the windowsills, was bright and warm.

Heurich, 97, Is Present

A few heads turned, a few voices murmured together in rusty whispers as Christian Heurich, 97, took his place in the group. "Didn't think he'd make it this year . . . the oldest one of all."

Wearing a dark blue suit and staring ahead of him with the questioning gaze of a man whose eyes are very tired, he never heard their whispers.

Order of business—the sound of a gavel—a querulous, aching rustle as they stood to honor a fellow member who had died.

"When in the course of human events . . ." That was the Declaration of Independence, of course. It was read every year. They sat up a little straighter. And then as the minutes went on, they forgot about it all together. Their eyes passed slowly over the portrait of George Washington, the steel engraving of Abraham Lincoln, as the voice of John B. Dickman, sr., read the words. It all meant something, of course—it was all very important—but it said so many things. They couldn't keep track of it.

Finally the Senator got up to speak. Senator who? (A hand, cupped to an ear.) Senator Capper, of Kansas.

A Stirring Talk

Well, now, this was something like it. Kind of made your blood feel warm again. (But down in the basement, Columbia Engine didn't stir.) No foreign "isms!" No foreign wars! The District of Columbia ought to have a vote!

The piano was a little out of tune but that didn't make any difference. A piano doesn't have to be just so to play "Auld Lang Syne." You can play "Auld Lang Syne" on any kind of piano and it still sounds good.

John Clagett Proctor, the acting president, was saying the meeting was over. Over for another year.

But the ice cream and cake—remember, serve the gentlemen on the platform first—it tasted pretty good.

Yes, sir, a nice meeting. A nice Fourth of July. You can't say the association doesn't know how to celebrate the Fourth.

Louisa Alcott's Wyoming Kin Visits D. C.; Says He's 'Not Interested' in Literature

Left to right—Alma Alcott, of California; Catherine Alcott, 13, with her collection of autographs; Mrs. A. L. Alcott, A. L. Alcott and Bobbie Alcott, 11. They are among the 118 Western farmers, visiting Washington, who call themselves the "corn huskers," a name given them by a Western newspaper that sponsors tours of the East. But, when it comes to corn husking, they have machines on Mr. Alcott's 480-acre Wyoming farm that do the work.

Some of Louisa May Alcott's kin folks are down at the Raleigh Hotel, one of them a gangly, rangy Wyoming farmer named A. L. Alcott, who talks with a dry, windparched humor of his first trip East, of the sugar beets and oats he grows—but with a balk over literature and Louise May.

He stopped abruptly yesterday in an enthusiastic story about his 480-acre irrigated farm on the Big Horn River, when the question came about Louis May, who wrote "Little Women," and about Bronson Alcott, the transcendentalist.

"I'm not interested in things like that," said Farmer Alcott. "But my sister there likes to keep up with all sorts of things." On the cue, his sister, who was small, quiet-voiced, said that there wasn't so much kinship after all, for their grandfather and Louise May Alcott's father were cousins. Or she thought that was the way it was.

Farmer Alcott reiterated that he didn't keep up with things like that; but he certainly did enjoy these organized tours. It was easy on a man; a man just sends in his check and forgets everything. Everything's fixed right for him all the way. No bother at all; even in the big cities, or at Niagara Falls, or at the World's Fair, there is so little bother. A man can, if he wants to, start wondering about how things are going back on the farm.

The 118 Western men, women and children on the tour call themselves the "Cornhuskers," the name given them by the Nebraska Farmer, the paper that for ten years has sponsored the trips East. Mrs. Estella T. Smith, of Brainard, Nebr., a banker back home, has been every year. But it is the first time East of Chicago for the Alcotts—who are accompanied by their children, Bobbie, 11; Catherine, 13, and Mr. Alcott's sister, Alma C. Alcott, of California.

Reds Would Bankrupt U. S., Teachers Told

Dies and La Follette Address Convention Committee Members

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, July 4.—The specter of an America bankrupt by Communists or lost through the destruction of "fundamental rights" was drawn across the stage of the National Education Association tonight by Congressional leaders connected with investigations around which violent controversy has raged.

Speakers at the educators' seventy-seventh annual convention were Representative Mason, of Illinois, member of the Dies Committee on un-American activities, and Senator Thomas of Utah, member of the La Follett committee on civil liberties.

Earlier today, Amy H. Hinrichs, of New Orleans, was given the unopposed nomination for the presidency of the National Teachers' group.

Says Bankruptcy Is Aim

Representative Mason, first of the two members of Congress on the program, said the present "objectives" of "American communists" were "to destroy the party in power. . . . establish the Farmer-Labor Party" in control . . ., and bankrupt the Nation so that a receiver will then be required—which receiver will be the highly organized militant, small group known as Communists."

He said "the President actually is playing into the hands of the Communists in his purging efforts," and cited "the case of Harry Bridges (West Coast C. I. O. director) . . . as an example of . . . encouragement . . given to activities of communistic leaders by Government officials.

The Illinois Representative contended "Communists occupy key positions in Government. The Department of Labor is honeycombed with them, and you will find them on the pay roll of the Labor Relations Board and the wage and hour law setup."

Fears Loss of Rights

Senator Thomas, stating that "democracy hangs on the thin thread of common consent," said "take away from the American Government the civil liberties guaranteed its citizens and we destroy the greatest blessing ever given to men in the history of all time. The marvel of history is that our experiment has worked as well as it has."

He said the La Follette committee spent "so much time on a study of industrial and labor abuses" because "something was occurring in our American industrial life which had all the seeds of the destruction of American fundamental rights."

He said he "firmly believed" that "constructive legislation" resulting from the work of the La Follette committee would "prevent a repetition of some of the abuses, some of the killings, and some of the suffering, but mainly the stifling of the personal liberties of many of our people in the past. . . . As time goes on, corrected industry will be just as happy over the reforms as society itself."

Hollywood Now Has Her Heart

Mary Martin, who skyrocketed to prominence by singing the song, "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," has been signed by Paramount films. The Texas girl sang in a Hollywood cafe two years ago and sought unsuccessfully at that time to crash the movies. She had to return to New York and become a stage hit before the films noticed her.

Crosby Raps Despotism of Axis States

Catholic Laywomen Conclude Retreat Congress in N. Y.

It is not merely the sanctity of the home that is being threatened by the totalitarian state, but also the dignity of he individual human being as a free spiritual entity, John F. Crosby, of Chevy Chase, Md., declared at the banquet closing the Laywomen's Retreat Congress in New York City.

Addressing an audience of more than 1,200 persons, including many from here, the former assistant to the Attorney General in the Wilson Administration advised "that we are fortunate to live in a country where men are still free, where they are acknowledged to have certain alienable rights and where the source of the meaning and beauty and power of life are recognized to be God and not the State."

"Today we are celebrating the solemn anniversary of that freedom," he said at the Hotel Commodore, "and can inded be grateful that the dank miasma of despotism that has arisen out of the weariness and heartaches of the old world has not yet swept across our shores and sought to suffocate the fresh young spirit of America. If that day ever comes there can be no doubt upon which side the Catholics of America will stand. We will resist with our lives, if need be."

Highlight of the conclave was the launching of a movement for retreats for the deaf, blind and industrial workers. Announcement was made that the 1940 convention would be held in Detroit.

7 Tank Cars Of Oil, Derailed, Burst Into Flame

Gardner, Ill., July 4 (INS).—An unplanned pyrotechnic display was witnessed by thousands of Fourth of July motorists today when 7 tank cars left the tracks and thousands of gallons of oil burst into flames.

Safety valves on the tank cars burst in rapid succession, shooting geysers of buring oil high into the air. A stiff wind blew the flaming sheets over a wide area and 10 acres of standing timber was soon ablaze.

Holiday traffic was blocked, and highways in all directions were choked with traffic.

Huge 'War Chest' Of Gold for Europe in U. S.

New York, July 4 (AP).—A huge potential "war chest" of gold has accumulated in the United States and Canada for the account of England and other foreign countries, mostly since the crisis last summer leading to the Munich pact.

From informed banking sources it was learned today approximately $250,000,000 was added in June to the fast-mounting foreign-owned gold store, making a record total of about $1,125,000,000 held here under "earmark."

In addition, more than $300,000,000 was reported to have been placed in reserve under earmark in Canada, mainly for England, making a total of about $1,500,000,000 in North America.

Dr. Lord, Bridge Expert, Found Dead of Fumes

Baltimore, July 4 (AP).—Dr. Llewellyn Williams Lord, dermatologist and known throughout the East as a bridge expert, was found dead early today in his apartment.

Police said the body, clad in pajamas, was in the pantry. The door to the adjoining kitchen was open and officers said burners on a gas range were on. Dr. and Mrs. Lord last February won the mixed team event in the Eastern bridge championship in New York.

Old Town Torn Down in Park to Improve View

Removal of hundreds of man-made structures to disclose roadside landscape in its original wild appearance, has been accomplished in Rocky Mountain National Park, Colorado, by the National Park Service.

Miles of fences and roads have been removed. An entire mountain village was carted away from the meadows of Moraine Peak, officials said.

This project included the tearing down and removal of about 30 old log houses, hotels and restaurants, leveling of sites, and restoration of the main street to natural meadow sod.

In Horseshoe Park and Beaver Meadows, several large hotels and other prominent structures have been eliminated.

Norton Death Is Held Suicide

Coroner MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide yesterday after an autopsy on Bernice Norton, 25-year-old nurse of the Alexandria Hospital. Miss Norton died at Georgetown Hospital Monday night. She had been found unconscious in a downtown hotel room.

She was the daughter of William H. Norton, owner of the Burgundy Farm and Dairy in Fairfax County.

3 Rail Workers Scalded in Blast

Baltimore, July 4 (AP).—Three men were scalded and burned today by a boiler explosion on a Baltimore & Ohio freight locomotive finishing a run from Potomac Yards near Alexandria.

They were Fireman Charles Gordon, Brakeman Patrick Gallagher, and Engineer Thomas Stringer. Railroad officials could give no reason for the explosion.

Lifting of Embargo On Arms to Cause War, Says Walsh

Fitchburgh, Mass., July 4 (U.P.)—Retention of the neutrality act—especially the existing ban on exports of munitions to belligerent nations—was urged today by United States Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts.

Addressing the 50,000 persons attending the joint celebration of Independence Day and the 175th anniversary of Fitchburg's founding, Walsh said:

"I am protesting the lifting of an arms embargo because it means raids on our commerce and will eventually result in war. That is something we do not want at any price.

"The provisions of the present neutrality act," he added, "are an essential element of any policy of real neutrality and that is the kind of neutrality the American people desire and ought to have."

U. S. Rescue Ship Hunts Lost French Submarine

Economic State Of Reich May Forestall War

Shortage of Labor, Food And Raw Materials Presents Handicap

By Walter B. Kerr.
Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, July 4.—Germany is faced with seemingly insurmountable obstacles to real preparedness for war, according to the semiannual economic review of the Reich Credit Gesellschaft, published today.

At a time when the entire world is studying the Reich's economic position in an effort to determine its war potential, this midyear report reveals there are still a number of monkey wrenches in the country's war machinery. Germany apparently is still handicapped by a severe shortage of labor, food products and raw materials.

This year's review publishes fewer facts than it has in recent years, and it still dodges carefully obvious conclusions. Yet foreign circles in Berlin consider it extremely important and believe it is the most valuable source of information of this country's economic condition. Study of it reveals conclusions:

That employment is nearing its peak and that the withdrawal of workers by mobilization in time of war would make it almost impossible to maintain the present output in essential industries and agriculture.

Labor Shortage of Million

That the progress of industrial construction under the four-year plan has failed to make the Reich immune to the effect of a blockade of raw materials.

That the man power and other resources which Germany obtained in the annexations of Austria, the Sudetenland, Bohemia, Moravia and Memel are practically exhausted, while officials estimate the labor shortage at 1,000,000 workers.

That German agriculture has passed through a crisis, although that at the end of April the country had impressive grain reserves (10,100,000 tons), twice as much as it had a year ago.

That, while Germany's southeastern lebensraum ("living space") might materially relieve the food situation, it could not supply, with two notable exceptions—oil and bauxite—a fraction of the essential war materials needed.

An economic expert who summarized the report found the labor shortage one of the weakest spots in Germany's militarized economy. Even with the present size of the armed forces, there is a shortage of 1,000,000 workers, and the only apparent way to increase the number of industrial and building workers is to import more foreign labor and "comb out superfluous labor" in the retail trades.

Extent of the shortage is indicated by the fact that in addition to importing labor from the annexed territories, the Reich put 600,000 women to work who never before had worked for wages. Besides, it forced 100,000 artisans to give up their independence and work as laborers in arms and munitions factories.

The report discloses that last year the synthetic gasoline industry produced 1,700,000 gallons. At the same time the consumption of motor fuel is increasing at a faster rate than domestic production. In the first three months of this year imports of motor fuel were 47 per cent higher than a year ago.

Obviously, the Reich is storing much oil for wartime use, but it is believed that it has not more than six months' supply.

The review prints impressive figures of the increased production of native iron ore, but neglects to add that 80 per cent of the country's ore consumption still depends on imports.

No Wheat Shortage

There is one bright spot in the wheat figures, and that is the result of last year's bumper crop. With the 10,100,000 tons stored at the end of April, and with the additional supplies it might get from Yugoslavia and Hungary, it is estimated that there would be no bread shortage for a year or two.

The fat deficit remains. The self-sufficiency quota of fat consumption rose from 48 per cent in 1933 to 56 per cent in 1938, but the improvement was largely the result of whale oil supplies brought in by the Reich's new whaling fleet. This probably would be stopped in war time. Still more ominous was the review's confession that the decline in butter production resulted from a shortage of farm labor.

The report gives prominence to a dangerous disproportion between the increasing labor income and an inadequate supply of consumer's goods. In the last five years the former has gone up 64 per cent and the latter only 29.5 per cent, which is held to be a dangerous source of potential, if not actual, inflation.

Finally, the review presents, in guarded words, a wealth of information which demonstrates that the country's economic structure is becoming increasingly top-heavy through credit expansion and public borrowing. It points to the need for still more rigid price and wage control, on the ground that the new financial plan, which is based on the issue of tax and wage certificates, and which came into force on May 1, removes some of the old checks on the country's expenditures.

Japan to Draft 1,100,000 for Labor Corps

Manchukuo Reports Outer Mongols Driven Back Across Border

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Wednesday), July 5.—While Japanese armies battled Chinese guerrillas and Soviet-Outer Mongolian forces, the cabinet today decided to mobilize 1,100,000 laborers throughout the Island Empire, effective July 15.

The move would be carried out under the broad provisions of the national mobilization law, and will be under the supervision of K. Aoki, president of the national planning board.

Conscript labor, including women, will be assigned as needed to the munitions industry, agriculture, and transport. Selected groups will be sent as emigrants in Manchukuo, there to join in the vast and expensive mining and railroad projects."

(Japan's national mobilization law, adopted in March, 1938, gives the government authority to draft all the empire's manpower and economic resources in time of need.

(Eleven of the act's 30 articles already have been invoked, requiring police registration of all adults and empowering the government to examine the reports of any business.)

"Border Re-established"

Meanwhile, a war office spokesman predicted early termination of Manchu-Mongol border warfare in announcing a smashing victory over Soviet-Mongol troops on the Khalka River.

Border detachments of Japan's Kwantung army in Manchukuo mustered a force of 4,000 soldiers from Soviet Russia's Outer Mongolian protectorate, the war office was advised.

"The legal border has been re-established," spokesman said, declaring that all the Outer Mongol invaders had been killed, captured, or driven back across the river.

Japanese said at least 14 Soviet planes were shot down early today while a large Russian air fleet was raiding a Japanese air base in Manchukuo.

Craigie and Arita Confer

Preliminary conversations continued with regard to the Anglo-Japanese conference to be held here to settle differences between the two powers brought on by the Japanese army's blockade of the British concession in Tientsin, North China.

British Ambassador Craigie visited Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita regarding the agenda for the formal sessions but it was understood no agreement was reached.

Arita reportedly insisted that Craigie agree to discuss British support for Japan's new North China currency and delivery of about $6,750,000 in Chinese silver which has been sequestered in the Tientsin concession.

(In London, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon told the House of Commons that Britain probably will continue to support Nationalist China's currency in foreign exchange markets, as the stability of this currency is of importance to British and other foreign traders in China.

(London has been supporting the Chinese Nationalist yuan for months under terms of an Anglo-Chinese stabilization agreement. The yuan recently has been at levels around 13 cents, compared to a former value of about 28 cents.)

"Preposterous Lie"

Tientsin, July 4 (AP).—British Consul General Edward G. Jamieson said today a Japanese report that he had been in contact with Chinese guerrillas was a "preposterous lie."

Domei, Japanese news agency, had quoted Japanese army officers as saying Jamieson had advance information on guerrilla plans to attack a Belgian-owned power plant which was raided Saturday night. The dispatch quoted the officers as saying they suspected British of supplying guerrillas with arms, ammunition and information on Japanese troop movements.

London and Paris May Ask Pledge

Nazi-Fascist aggression in Europe.

In some circles, especially among Soviet authorities of London, it was believed highly probable the British premier may even announce an agreement in principle has been reached with Moscow.

"There is no doubt that good progress was made in the last talks in Moscow," a source close to the Soveit embassy declared. "And there is considerable greund for optimism that a full agreement will soon be reached."

Among other points settled, this source said, was the difficult question of guarantees for Russia's Baltic neighbors. All three powers, he said, have now agreed to guarantee these states against aggression and to name them in the projected pact, as Russia has insisted.

The entire British cabinet was summoned into session an hour earlier than usual tomorrow to discuss further the nature of possible Polish representations to be made to the Danzig Senate regarding reports of German militarization of the Free City. In addition, the cabinet will consider whether Britain and France should publicly support the Polish note.

[The United Press reported from Paris that Great Britain and France were also considering the advisability of urging the League of Nations High Commissioner for Danzig, Karl J. Burkhardt, to demand that Danzig's Nazi Senate immediately halt all military measures in the Free City.

[If the Danzig Senate refused to comply Burkhardt could, under the Danzig statute, authorize Poland to send troops into Danzig.

[The Polish government had been reported considering the threat of the dispatch of troops unless the demilitarization was carried out within a fixed limit of time.—Editor's note.]

So urgent were the government decisions to be made on foreign affairs that the foreign affairs committee of the cabinet held two special sessions during the day.

Ambassador Reports

During the early session, which was taken up largely by consideration of the Danzig crisis, British Ambassador Kennard was one of the principal speakers. He told the ministers of the latest Polish views. Kennard arrived in London yesterday by plane from Warsaw.

The second session concerned largely the Moscow negotiations.

So anxious were the western powers to enlist Russia in the anti-aggression front that they agreed last week to capitulate to the Soviet demand that antiaggression pledges include Latvia, Esthonia and Finland.

Then the British and French submitted a memorandum, adding Holland and Switzerland to the eight other countries whom Britain and France have decided to defend against any aggression.

The other eight countries are Poland, Rumania, Greece, Turkey, Belgium, Latvia, Esthonia and Finland.

Russia replied yesterday that she is unwilling to give guarantees to the Netherlands and Switzerland unless Poland and Turkey enter into full-fledged alliances with her.

Further Concessions Likely

The Polish and Turkish governments have agreed to enter into mutual defense alliances with Britain and France, and Russia demands the same sort of treaties with them.

The cabinet's foreign affairs committee seemed prepared to make further concessions to overcome Russia's objections.

It was suggested that the Anglo-French request for tri-power guarantees to Holland and Switzerland might be withdrawn.

This course also was suggested by objections from The Netherlands government, which is opposed to being involved in any pact with Moscow.

Although Poland has modified her opposition to any Russian aid in recent weeks due to the Danzig threats, it is believed that Warsaw would balk at any formal alliance with Soviet Russia, from whom she acquired territory after the World War. Rumania is in a similar position.

Turkey, however, is a friendly neighbor of the Soviets and probably would agree to such an alliance.

Latvia and Esthonia, who recently signed nonaggression treaties with Germany, object to any "peace front" guarantees which might jeopardize their standing with Hitler.

It was learned a full agreement has been reached in Moscow on all diplomatic formulas of the pact including the question of what will constitute aggression.

There was also a possibility that if present negotiations fail Britain may propose to Moscow a temporary three-power mutual assistance treaty operating only in the event of a direct aggressive attack on one of the signatory nations. This would leave for later discussion the question of other states to be guaranteed and Russia thus would be neutral in the event of a German attack on Poland.

Hore-Belisha in Paris

Paris, July 4 (AP).—British War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha declared tonight to the "whole world" that Britain and France "understand completely the character of the challenge which is offered to us and will meet it, if need be, with decision."

Speaking at a France-Britain association dinner after a day spent conferring with British Ambassador Phipps, Gen. Gamelin, commander in chief of French armed forces, and various other French leaders, the visitor emphasized British-French collaboration.

Hore-Belisha said France and Britain have a "complete interchange of information, knowledge and experience. We live as comrades as, if need be, we shall die..."

He said France had the world's finest army and Britain the finest navy and together, at the present pace of production, "shall have the most modern and in quality the most powerful air forces."

Burckhardt Asks Peace

Free City of Danzig, July 4 (AP).—Dr. Carl Burckhardt, League of Nations high commissioner to Danzig, today said men of good will everywhere must combine their talent to preserve peace.

"The highest duty of everyone in these serious hours is to exert every effort to save peace, and with good will it can be done," he said. "The highest obligation of everyone is to bend every effort to preserve peace. We must not exaggerate events in uneasy Danzig. Overstatement contributes unnecessarily to the tension of the moment."

Polish Chiefs Weigh Course In 3-Hour Talk

British and French Attitude on Danzig Is Reported by Envoy

By the United Press.

Warsaw, July 4.—President Moscicki and key government and military leaders conferred three hours tonight to discuss Poland's protest to Danzig's Nazi Senate against military measures in the Free City.

The conference was called immediately after the arrival from London of Polish Ambassador Raczynski bearing information of the official British and French attitude toward the Danzig situation.

Rydz-Smigly Present

Meeting with Moscicki were Foreign Minister Beck, Marshal Rydz-Smigly, the "strong man" of Poland; Premier and Minister of Interior Slawoj-Skladowski and Minister of Finance Kwaitkowski, who also is vice premier.

In addition to the discussion of the projected protest to Danzig against the organization of a fighting "free corps" and the placing of artillery pieces on strategic hilltops, the leaders heard a report from Col. Adam Koc, head of a Polish military and economic delegation which has just returned from London.

Raczynski and Col. Koc will return to London this week and are expected to make arrangements for the delivery of British raw materials, industrial machines and airplanes to strengthen Poland's defense position.

Loan Being Sought

It was understood negotiations for a large British loan were well advanced.

Some quarters believed the government had decided to refrain from sending a formal note of protest to the Nazi Senate, at least until after Britain and France decide whether they will intervene in warning the Nazi leaders.

Instead of a formal note, it was said, the Polish diplomatic representative in Danzig, Dr. Marian Chodacki, will make verbal representations to the Danzig Senate.

'Bunk!' Swedes Visiting D. C. Call War Talk

European Conditions Not Half So Bad as Pictured, They Say

Europe, a continent seething with war activity, war talk and war preparations—bunk!

That, in so many words, is the Swedish outlook on the foreign situation as imparted here yesterday by a group of pleasure-bound tourists from the land of fir trees and lakes.

"People in America," said a spokesman, "go to Europe to get away from war news and war scares."

The 50 typical citizens from Sweden's major cities crowded the lobby of Wardman Park Hotel, their voices blending in a babble of strange words, their gestures indicating a rather awed interest in the surroundings and their mere presence attracting stares from the inevitable lobby-sitters.

From Bror Centerwall, Gothenburg newspaper editor, and Stig Arfvidson, director of the tour, came the group's sentiment anent Europe's war clouds.

"Your American papers talk too much nonsense," said Centerwall, and Arfvidson nodded a smiling assent.

"There are too many scare-headlines and your people eat them up," said Arfvidson, and Centerwall nodded vigorously.

Then they both started at once, the gist being:

Conditions in Europe, as seen by Europeans, are not half as bad as newspapers in the United States would have you believe; there is no talk of war abroad and people aren't jittery; "war by August" is a "ridiculous" prospect; American war talk is ruining foreign travel business and the whole thing is one big mess because Americans like to have something to talk about.

No one in Europe, both men agreed, believes there will be another war, no one wants another war and no one is paying any attention to news from the uncensored American press as it seeps into foreign countries.

The 50 Swedish travelers are on a cruise conducted by the American Express Co.

Arms Spending Booms Trade Over England

Recovery Speeded As Heavy Industries Call Back Workers

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

London.—Great Britain, her economists say, appears to be on the verge of a great business revival. Recovery is gaining headway with impressive momentum "because of and despite" the taut, warlike European scene.

Rearmament on a colossal scale is the accepted cornerstone of recovery, however temporary and ultimately unsettling it may prove to be. Britain is spending $2,948,400,000 on rearmament in one year alone in its new budget. Sir John Simon cautioned the House of Commons that even this astronomical figure may be increased.

As for the "in spite of" circumstance, the armament stimulation of heavy industry is cramming huge sums into pay packets and starting a wide spiral of spending even by those who normally would be cautious of their commitments in times of world political tension.

Forced Recovery in a Way

To this extent at least it might be called a forced recovery.

There are some who argue the "pump priming" caused by rearmament will bring into play underlying normal and sound bases for prosperity.

There are many indices of the growing speed of the trade revival. Unemployment is declining steadily not only in heavy industry, but in trade fields.

For instance, textiles are improving partly because of cloth needed to clothe the 1,000,000 trained soldiers Britain will have by the end of 1939, and partly because the average worker has more to spend on clothes for himself and his family.

The peak of rearmament effort in Britain's plants and factories has not yet been reached on the basis of existing contracts and plans.

May 15 there were 1,492,000 jobless in Britain, or 288,523 less than at that time in 1938.

For April and May, unemployment declined by 152,000—the largest decline for that period since records have been kept. Unemployment has decreased by 547,000 in the first five months of 1939.

Trades Take Up Slack

Heavy industry absorbed the greatest number from the unemployment rolls in the April-May period, but a notable aspect was the extent to which retail and wholesale trade took up the slack.

Another bright point is that the largest reductions were made where unemployment hitherto has been greatest—the industrial areas of South Wales, the Midlands and the North.

Great attention is given to steel output—traditional barometer of the health of heavy industry.

During the January-May period the average daily output of steel increased from 27,245 tons (a rate of 9,945,000 tons annually), to 36,300 tons daily (a rate of 13,250,000 tons annually). There still is available an active plant potential of 350,000 tons annually, and a further reserve of 750,000 tons annually from plants now idle.

Shipyards Busy

The government's shipbuilding subsidy has brought orders for about 225 ships to merchant yards in the past eight weeks. Full effect of the subsidy, however, has not been felt. The Board of Trade recently said orders had been placed or proposed for about 1,000,000 tons.

Many hitherto unemployed shipwrights have found work in naval yards, which are working near full capacity. About 165 naval vessels, totaling about 698,000 tons, are under construction or ordered.

Building trade has received a fillip from extensive government contracts for barracks, airport buildings, and other construction for defense.

Value of daily retail sales during April increased 1.3 per cent over April last year.

Austrian Nazis Rotten Egg Cardinal

Innitzer Abandons Diocesan Tour; Crowd Calls Him 'Murderer'

By the United Press.

Vienna, July 4.—Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, Catholic primate of Austria and foe of the Nazis, today abandoned a diocesan tour after Nazi crowds shouting "murderer!" pelted him with rotten eggs and potatoes and beat his chauffeur.

The worst attack of several on a week-long tour occurred Sunday in the town of Koenigsbruenn, 25 miles from Vienna, where the energetic action of the local gendarmerie probably saved the 63-year-old archbishop from being knocked down and beaten.

The Cardinal, whose palace in Vienna was sacked by a Nazi mob last October, was showered with insults by the Koenigsbruenn crowd and his biretta (cap) was knocked from his head with an umbrella.

The crowd gathered outside the Catholic church, where Innitzer had preached a sermon on peace, and attacked him when he attempted to leave with an old overcoat hiding his priestly robes.

His personal attendant was showered with eggs and potatoes when he preceded Innitzer from the church and the prelate's chauffeur was mauled and beaten when he tried to bring the Cardinal's car to the church door. The chauffeur's clothes were torn from him.

A local school teacher led the crowd shouting:

"Herr Cardinal, your hands are sticky with the blood of Horzweber and Planetta!"

Others took up the cry, referring to Innitzer's refusal to intercede against death sentences imposed on Nazis after the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss in the 1934 Austrian Nazi putsch.

Warned to Halt Tour

Earlier in his tour, which began June 28, the Cardinal had been threatened and warned to discontinue his trip.

The first unpleasant incident occurred at Nieder Russbach June 27 when demonstrators gathered outside the Catholic church where it had been planned to hold an outdoor confirmation of 12 children. The crowd compelled Innitzer to take the ceremony indoors and kept up continuous shouts and insults during the service.

On June 29 at Ziersdorf demonstrators smashed windows in the home of a local policeman where Innitzer was spending the night. Police placed guards around the house.

Koenigsbruenn apparently was chosen as the scene for the most violent demonstration because the priest there is non-German and is said to speak German very poorly.

Dr. O'Connell to Speak

Dr. Geoffrey O'Connell will speak on "Catholic Education and Contemporary Non-Catholic Philosophies" in McMahon Hall auditorium at Catholic University at 8 o'clock tonight. The lecture is the first of 13 in the summer series sponsored by the university.

'March of Time' Will Show March of Movies

New Issue Devoted to Progress of the Cinema; 'Iowa Night' to Be Observed at RKO-Keith's; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THE NEXT ISSUE of "The March of Time" should be of keen interest both to those whose memory extends back to the inception of the motion picture industry and those of later generations who may feel that present-day screen entertainment is not as good as it should be. This latter group will find out.

Abandoning contemplation of international affairs for the nonce, the new "March of Time" bears the title of "The Movies March On" and traces the progress of the film industry from its birth in Thomas A. Edison's old Orange, N. J., experimental laboratory, at the turn of the century, up to Hollywood as it is today.

BELL

The film will show more than two dozen memorable scenes from pictures that are now historic—the famed May Irwin-John C. Rice kiss of 1896, "The Great Train Robbery," "The New York Hat," "The Fugitive," "Tillie's Punctured Romance," "A Night Out," David Wark Griffith's famed "Birth of a Nation," "Thais" and other films that today are recognized as marking definite milestones in the development and progress of the cinema.

Many of these ancient titles will bring back vivid memories to the old-timers among the picturegoers. "The Great Train Robbery," of course, was the first motion picture that ever attempted to relate a connected story in terms of dramatic action. "The New York Hat" was one of Mary Pickford's early hits and was both written and directed by D. W. Griffith. Mary Garden was the star of "Thais," which, as I remember it, was a Sam Goldwyn production of the old silent days, in which the star made one of her most flamboyant appearances.

But "The Birth of a Nation" and "Tillie's Punctured Romance" are the two lodged deepest in my memory. While scraping together the last of the money necessary to complete his film—which was financed almost reel by reel—Griffith came to Washington and worked on a musical setting for the film version of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." When the whole thing finally was ready, it was given a preview performance in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel in compliment to the President's Cabinet, members of the Supreme Court, the Senate and House of Representatives. As a member of the "working press," I managed to wriggle in on that memorable occasion and sat goggle-eyed before the then stupendous action of the first picture in history to command a New York reserved-seat engagement at the $2 scale of prices. During its later record engagement at the National Theater, as a road show attraction, I saw it so many times that finally I could tell exactly at what point the picture was by the strains of the musical score that drifted out into the lobby while I was trying to mooch another ticket.

Time Works Changes

Back in the old days when the late Harry M. Crandall's biggest and best downtown theater was the Joy, at Ninth and E streets—now a help-yourself-and-pay-the-cashier cafeteria—"Tillie's Punctured Romance" was the most sensational success he ever had on his screen. It packed them in day and night at a flat price of 25 cents, when 10 and 15 cents were the usual Ninth street admissions.

Years later, when the Metropolitan stood in need of an unusual feature, Mr. Crandall remembered "Tillie's Punctured Romance" as a comedy that would stand revival—"magnificent production," all-star cast, a whirlwind story, etc., etc. The all-star cast part was true enough. Mack Sennett put everybody he had in this one—Marie Dressler, Charlie Chaplin, Ford Sterling, Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin, Al St. John, Mabel Normand and all the rest.

So we got a print of "Tillie's Punctured Romance" and screened it surreptitiously in the projection room. The settings looked as if they might have been made out of cardboard boxes, the cast was okay but their material seemed something less than terrific and the entire business was so outmoded that even Mr. Crandall admitted that his recollection must have been colored a little by those first-run box-office receipts.

This is the sort of development that will be traced in "March of Time." It should interest everyone that motion pictures interest.

That attractive blonde who centered so much attention on the first row at the opening of Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's Olney Theater on Monday night, was Karen Morley, brilliant young screen actress, who will succeed Helen Twelvetrees as guest star of the troupe next week in "Susan and God." Between the acts, Miss Morley confided that she was just a little weary, having arrived in town at 8:30 a. m. Monday, by train from Hollywood, but that with a night's rest she would be tearing into rehearsals with full vigor. The Gertrude Lawrence role will not be new to her. She played it last season with high success. On Thursday afternoon she will be heard on the air from Baltimore at 4:30 o'clock in an interview that was arranged in my hearing Monday night. So now you can listen.

Phil Stong hails from Iowa. He also wrote the story upon which the RKO-Radio screen play of "Career" is based. So Friday night will be "Iowa Night" at RKO-Keith's Theater, where the picture opens that morning.

Senators Guy M. Gillette and Clyde E. Herring, as well as the Iowa delegation in the House of Representatives have accepted Manager Hardie Meakin's invitation to be his guests at the 9 o'clock performance Friday night. The picture will inaugurate its local engagement, as usual, on Friday morning. The 9 p. m. performance is "special" only to the extent indicated.

Additional interest attaches to "Career" by reason of the fact that it stars Edward Ellis, recently signed to a new long-term contract on the strength of his work in "A Man to Remember," and features Alice Eden and John Archer, selected as finalists in Jesse L. Lasky's recent "Gateway to Hollywood" contest, in which many Washingtonians participated.

Fifth-of-Jury Note

It is a proud privilege to live in a country where the people salute the flag through love and respect, instead of fear of the concentration camps.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 4.

11 P. M.: "Dr. Eugene Colligan, president of Hunter, College, doesn't intend to return to his post after his vacation," a municipal official reveals at Moore's. "The Board of Higher Education already is seeking a successor" . . . "I'm here to get in shape," John Montague, the mystery-man golfer, declares at the Riviera, "and to try and get Babe Ruth to tour the country with me, playing golf" . . . "I fired all the help at my home," Gypsy Rose Lee, now a Broadway star, confesses at the Tavern. "I do all the cooking, the laundry, clean the house and drive my husband to the station every morning" . . . Joe Jacobs, manager of Tony Galento, steps to the Cotton Club's dance floor, proceeds to fox-trot . . . just as a jitterbug whirls his partner around, smack into Jacobs—who is dropped for a count of four.

12 P. M.: "The only man who has entered the Amazon area at the fair grounds," a World's Fair employe states at Tony's, "is Ed Wynn. He carried the umbrella for the Queen Amazon" . . . "I got into this argument with Sam Goldwyn," a film executive reports at the Paradise, "and Sam turned on me and shouted: 'For your information—let me ask you this question?'" . . . "I'm glad you liked my husband in 'Gunga Din,' Mrs. Sam Jaffe relates at Sardi's. "Y'know, when Sam went to see the picture with Sidney Hillman, the labor leader, he waited in line, just like the rest of the movie-goers, for 45 minutes" . . . "Billy Rose wants to buy Eleanor Holm some jewelry," a jeweler informs at the Algonquin, "so Billy called in a group of jewelers, described what he wanted—and then asked them to submit sealed bids."

1 A. M.: "Mayor LaGuardia is trying to lure Commander Herlands away from the district attorney's nomination in Brooklyn," a political leader declares at the Waldorf Roof. "Fiorello is offering Herlands other jobs, but without success" . . . "The last time Gregory Ratoff and his estranged wife, Eugenie Leontovich, got together," one of their friends reports at the International Casino, "she told the guests: 'Gregory has a real surprise for you. He's going to make a speech—in good English'" . . . "Betty Lawford, who took a bath on-stage during every performance of 'The Women,' was asked by M. G. M. to pose with Joan Crawford, who has that role in the movie version," a producer relates at the Gay 90's. "Betty was to pose, showing Joan how to take a bath. Joan told Betty: 'You'll really have to show me—because I never take baths, only showers.' I just checked that with Franchot Tone. He said that's true."

2 A. M.: "At the 18 Club, Jed Harris sits with Damon Runyon and confides: 'I wanted Damon to play the Frank Craven role in 'Our Town,' but Damon refused to become an actor'" . . . "President Roosevelt sent an autographed photo of himself to Harpo Marx," a film editor informs at the Swing Club. "In acknowledgment, Harpo sent the President his own autographed photo" . . . "Donald went to the Yale Club to make a phone call from the booth, while I waited outside in the street," Mrs. Donald Ogden Stewart relates at the Roosevelt. "He was late for his plane, so I went inside to remind him. Before I could get to the booth three guards blocked my way and chorused: 'Modom—this is the YALE Club'" . . . "Look magazine and the American Commentator for Anti-Nazi Literature will collaborate," an editor states at the Versailles, "on a photo contest concerning Nazi activities in America."

3 A. M.: "Jack Buchanan and P. G. Wodehouse had appointments at each other's house, but missed each other," a Briton reports at The Whirling Top. "After the fourth time Wodehouse missed Buchanan again. So he got a pair of pajamas and went to sleep in Buchanan's bed—until the star came home at 4:30" . . . "Want to speak to Billy Leeds?" John Perona invites at El Morocco. "He's phoning—from his yacht in the Caribbean" . . . "Illa Roden of the Refugee Revue, 'From Vienna,' already has been tagged for stardom," a director informs at the Kit Kat. "She's been offered the Zorina role for the tour of 'I Married an Angel.'" who seem, at least, to have the courage to face with laughter whatever it is they are facing. This quartet of gifted young women, who scored so decisively in the Warner Brothers production of "Four Daughters," will be seen on the Earle screen, beginning Friday, in "Daughters Courageous," a sequel to that picture.

4 A. M.: "Frank Fay has received a number of vaudeville engagements and propositions to appear in Broadway musicals, as a result of his own recent vaudeville venture," one of Fay's intimates reports at the Havana-Madrid. "But in that show of his Frank lost $25,000."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 4 (INS).—Thrilling to this writer and, I know to thousands of other admirers of David Warfield, that he has been paged by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the role of the professor in "The Mortal Storm." Warfield, now in his seventies, has been retired from the stage for many years and, although he had many, many offers to appear in motion pictures, he would never consent. I remember so well talking to him when he was offered a small fortune to bring his best-loved stage play, "The Music Master," to the screen. "I don't know anything about motion pictures," he told me, "and I am afraid of them." But, of course, that was before the talkies.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"The Mortal Storm" is the Phyllis Bottome novel laid in Germany and deals with the Nazi situation. The old professor goes to a concentration camp, but he never loses his philosophy of life. Margaret Sullavan will play his daughter and as soon as Warfield gives his answer, a definite starting date will be set. Claudine West has finished the script, with Sidney Franklin slated to produce it.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Unconfirmed rumor is that the Countess di Frasso has lost her historic villa in Rome to the government; Jack Holt will soon be a grand-daddy, and is he pleased! Young Tim's wife, the former Virginia Ashcroft, has dated the stork; whispers are loud that Beryl Scott and Johnny Weissmuller had a battle that nearly ended everything a few days ago. She sent word to friends in Beverly Hills that she wanted to come back and stay; Rubinoff, the romantic fiddler, is in town, doing the night spots with Iris Winter; Paulette Goddard weeping out loud because she wasn't permitted to fly East for the "Gentlemen Prefer Blonds" tryout. M.-G.-M. said no, on account of possible retakes for "The Women."

Olympe Bradna, who wouldn't wear tights or be kissed in a movie scene, etc., etc., has bought herself the brightest red cap in captivity; Gail Patrick had the Zane Greys as her guests at the baseball game and Zane, who used to be a professional, yearned to get back into action; Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and his bride will honeymoon on a plantation in Virginia; Hedy Lamarr never misses an evening picking up her bridegroom, Gene Markey, at the T-C-F Studio; the Jack Warners sail on the Normandie August 2. So do the Eddie Robinsons, and it will be a merry party, with Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon returning home on the same ship; Doris Nolan and Gregory La Cava, who called it a day some months ago, were back together again at Marcel's; Nelson Eddy birthday-partied over the holidays; Peter Lorre back in Hollywood after his long illness.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Little Towns Produce Most Movie Heroes

Attention: All girls looking for handsome husbands!

You're wasting your time in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Detroit. For America's best looking men—at least, the most popular kind—come from small towns. It's a fact!

Practically every leading man of popular interest in films today is from a small town. And that, apparently, is where the handsome heroes hang out.

Clark Gable calls Cadiz, Ohio, his home town. Robert Taylor was born in Filley, Nebr. Fred MacMurray, Irene Dunne's current love interest in "Invitation to Happiness," was born in Kankakee, Ill., and grew up in Beaver Dam, Wis.

Mountain View, Ark., hails Dick Powell as its favorite son, and Kenocha, Wis., sings the praises of Don Ameche. Helena, Mont., will tell you all about Gary Cooper, if you'll take time to listen, and Grand Island, Nebr., is pretty proud of the accomplishments of Henry Fonda.

Up in Spokane, Wash., they still talk about the days when Bing Crosby was a schoolboy at Gonzaga, and Racine, Wis., has a lot of citizens who recall when Fredric March was a small boy.

The smaller towns, however, didn't limit themselves to the handsome hero type. Bob Burns is from Van Buren, Ark., as you may have heard. Bette Davis, academy award winner, is from Lowell, Mass., while Joan Bennett first saw the light of day in Palisades, N. J.

The ROMANCE of a
BASHFUL MAN

GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS—in our opinion the most thoroughly delightful picture ever produced—has been praised for many reasons by many critics.

But its fondest memory to us lies in the haunting charm of its gentle, tender love story—the romance of Mr. Chips, a bashful man.

Timid, shy men may not seem exciting to some. But Mr. Chips—you'll love him!

This bashful professor—some may even call him an introvert—was growing old and seedy, far beyond his years. He never even dreamed of romance . . . girls? He wouldn't dare!

Then one day, hiking in the mountains, as misty night fell, he met a pretty girl.

And that mountain meeting, that night in the mist, gives the screen the most touching love scene we have ever seen pictured! It's not movie stuff!

Amazed, he falls in love. Astounded, he dares hope this pretty girl likes him—the bashful Mr. Chips!

Then a timid pursuit by bicycle; a touching interlude on the Blue Danube; a dizzy, delirious moment when the pretty girl dances in his inexperienced arms. Who proposes . . . she or he?

Then marriage . . . the seedy, shy Mr. Chips and his deeply understanding, girlish wife. Years roll away from Mr. Chips; he's younger; he's gay; he sparkles; he becomes beloved.

And he is bashful no more.

Roosevelt Invites War, Says Hoover

Assails President 'Taking' Seat in Game Of Power Politics

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 4.—Herbert Hoover asserts in a magazine article to be published tomorrow that President Roosevelt has brought threat of war closer to this country by taking "a seat at the table where (international) power politics is being played."

Writing in the current issue of the American magazine, the former President says "the danger of our being dragged into war lie in these directions:

"1. Foreign propaganda to inflame our emotions and to mold our minds to war.

"2. Preachments of our own mistaken officials and citizens which, in effect, support these propagandas.

"3. Steps taken by our own Government which, while denying that they are intended to take us into war, yet entangle us with these very controversies, the end of which may be war."

Asks Statement

To stay out of war, Hoover asserts, "the first thing required is vigorous, definite statement from all who have responsibility, both publicly and privately, that we are not going to war with anybody in Europe unless they attack the Western Hemisphere.

"The second thing is not to sit in this game of power politics."

Regarding the danger of war, which he says "comes from the politics of our own Government," Hoover adds:

"President Roosevelt has taken a seat at the table where power politics is being played. He has joined the chessboard of Europe. He lines us up in the balance of power. It is said we can do this without joining in war.

"It is said we will do something more than words and less than war. When we open fire on the front we are in the fight. The enemy will fire back with more than words. If the more than words fail to overcome him we have to go further. For then we have to win or be overcome on our side. Let nobody say that you can do such things without danger of war itself."

Discussing the activities of propagandists, Hoover continues:

"We are told that we must join in war or democracy will disappear from the earth. From the alliance of the democracies with several totalitarian states that ideological issue seems somewhat confused.

"My sympathies are with the democracies. But the democracies of western Europe have the resources to defend themselves . . . We are told that if they fall we shall be the next victim. I do not agree that they will fall. But if they do fall the exhaustion of the dictators will be such that these countries will leave us alone for a quarter of a century at least.

"And propaganda showers upon us in other forms . . . And another form of war conditioning of the public mind is the firing of words by our government officials at the nations we don't like. So long as we confine it to words, the dictators will fire back an equally insulting lot of words, and we wind up even.

Dictators Excel at Words

"Soapbox oratory is the necessary equipment of modern dictators, and they excel. Only the really neutral nations could judge as to who wins in these jousts of billingsgate. But they build up hateful emotions both ways.

"And that does not imply that we should ever neglect to express indignation at great wrong. But the terms we use are important if it is results we seek and not propaganda."

Recalling his service in relief work and his observation of "the moving tragedy of the World War," the former President declares:

"We may need to go to war again. But that war should be on this hemisphere alone and in the defense of our firesides or our honor. For that alone should we pay the price."

"Europe," he continues, "is again engaged in a hideous conflict for power. Stripped to its bones, today the quarrel is much the same (as in the World War.) . . .

"What is proposed? That we join to stop inevitable movements and readjustments of peoples; that we engage in ideological wars. Who will pay for it in blood and treasure? Our children."

"The greatest immediate service that we can render," the former President says at another point, "is to join in economic co-operation with other nations to relieve the economic pressures which are driving the world constantly to instability. . . . We should resume the conferences which were started under such good auspices by our country in 1932.

"But far beyond that, we can hold the light of liberty alight on this continent. That is the greatest service we can give to civilization."

Russia Announces Cancer 'Meter'

Moscow, July 4 (AP).—An electrical "disease meter" constructed by Russian scientists is proving successful in the early diagnosis of cancer, Iztvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, reported today.

Experiments with the "disease meter" are continuing. Izvetia did not describe the apparatus beyond saying it incorporates or adapts the technique hitherto used by physicians in the analysis of molecular structure.

Beaming with pride at being selected to lead the grand parade of 10,000 delegates, 80 members of Washington Christian Endeavor Societies are en route to Cleveland to participate in the thirty-seventh annual international Christian Endeavor convention, opening tomorrow.

Thus honored because they exceeded by 30 their delegation quota of 50, the youngsters, from dozens of Washington churches, attired in red, white and blue outfits, will march at the head of the procession, carrying first place and local union banners and American and District flags.

Former President Herbert Hoover, John W. Bricker, Governor of the host State; Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York; Dr. Walter H. Judd, medical missionary to China, and other dignitaries will address the conclave, the theme of which will be "Christ Calls," interpreted in terms of personal and social responsibilities shared by modern Christian youth.

On the opening night Hoover will receive International Youth's Distinguished Service Award with Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Endeavor Society, making the bestowal. Mrs. Poling will conduct a "daily fellowship of prayer."

Mrs. Edna Greene, for many years counselor of the local Endeavor Union and member of Calvary Baptist Church, and Miss Pauline Shoemaker, union president and Rhode Island Avenue Methodist parishioner, will be in the group, which will include the following:

From Calvary Baptist Church—Mr. J. N. Bonum, Mrs. J. N. Bonum, Mr. L. C. Greene, Mrs. Edna Greene, Miss Monette Hallam, Mrs. Mabel K. Howard, Mr. Leon B. Spencer, Mrs. Cecil Spencer.

From Chevy Chase Baptist—Miss Esther Barcroft, Miss Ruth Haverstock, Miss Vinchenza Spano, Miss Mary Watkins.

From Church of the Covenant—Mr. Ernest Bryan, Miss Laura Diebert, Mrs. Rachael Diebert, Mr. Bob McCackran, Miss Marguerite Pope, Mr. Melvin Williams, Miss Patricia Williams, Mr. Paul Williams, Mr. John Van der Veer.

From Church of the Reformation—Mr. Roy Hickman.

From Columbia Heights Christian—Mr. Cecil Harp.

From Eastern Presbyterian—Mr. Bob Crammer, Miss Augusta Kauffman.

From Eckington Presbyterian—Miss Mary Steele.

From Keller Memorial Lutheran—Mr. Emory Ackerman, Mr. Don Lee, Mr. Billy Miller, Mr. Ray Rinker, Mr. Philip Seltzer.

From National City Christian—Miss Amy Perkins.

From Ninth Street Christian—Mr. Jimmy Ellerbrook, Miss Georgia Lee Norris, Dr. Fred W. Norris, Miss Betty Wray, Miss Jean Wray, Miss Robbie Virginia Young.

From Potomac Heights Community—Miss Nancy Olds, Mr. Bob Philo, Mrs. Hans Sorenson, Mr. Hans Sorenson, Miss June Sorenson, Miss Jane Morse, Alice Beal.

From Rhode Island Avenue Methodist—Mr. Albert Jones, Miss Pauline Shoemaker.

From St. Paul's English Lutheran—Miss Helen Beiswanger.

From Sherwood Presbyterian—Miss Lorena Poole, Miss Dorothy Werth.

From Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian—Mr. Milton Chase, Miss Kitty Ritchie.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., July 4.—(My guest columnist today is one of the most amusing persons even in Hollywood, and one of the kindest to work with. He has been through the mill and he knows the players' problems and paves the way.—H. H.).

By Gregory Ratoff.

It's been a long time, Hedda, since I told you of my aspirations to become a motion picture director. I was then only another actor, a comedian at that, brought to Hollywood where I had no friends. And remember that you were one of the few people who encouraged me and told me that I had a good chance here.

Now I've finished directing my seventh picture at Twentieth Century-Fox, "Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women" and I feel that I've arrived at the work which I had always wanted to do, for I'm doing "Intermezzo" at Selznick's.

A person goes through lots before he gets what he wants. I'm sure this is what I was groping for when I enrolled in the St. Petersburg Dramatic School at the same time I was studying law. "The nerve of me," my friends said.

Of course, that was in the prewar days when Russia was peaceful and had no inkling of things to come. I made my debut as a butler in Ostrovsky's "Mad Money" and was launched as an actor, but I was more interested in what everyone else was doing, particularly the men who made the wheels go round. That's what I wanted.

I might have had it in Russia if the war hadn't broken out shortly after.

It was an insane time for anyone to think of a career, with the world gone mad, suffering all over Europe. In revolution-torn Russia theaters were still playing, some of them. I got roles here and there, and acted while governments fell and changed.

After the war, I wandered on to Berlin, where I sang and danced in one of the night clubs. I don't know whether I told you before, Hedda, but being a song and dance man was one of my great specialties in my early days. In Berlin the master of ceremonies who introduced me was Fritz Feld, whom I directed not long ago in "Lancer Spy" at Twentieth Century-Fox.

It was my singing and dancing that brought me to America in 1922. Lee Shubert saw me in Paris and took me to New York, where I played in 32 Shubert plays.

That was a grand break for anyone just out for an acting career, but I was still on pins and needles to get out on my own and do the things I wanted to do most. Finally the chance came and I produced eight plays, including "Candlelight" and "The Kibitzer," which, as you will remember, were not bad.

I had another incentive then. It was in 1922 that Eugenie Leontovich and I were married, and what joy to work together. There is nothing like having your work and romance all tied up together. My one regret about my present position is that Eugenie and I cannot be together, for our romance now, 17 years later, is still what is was in those days.

But to get back to this business of finding the job I wanted. While staging those eight plays with the help of Eugenie, David Selznick saw me in one of them and took me to Hollywood for a role in "Symphony of Six Million." So there I was back again as an actor.

I hadn't even seen movies made. I had a hard time keeping my mind where it belonged. I was fascinated by what went on behind the camera, particularly the director. That, I said to myself, was where I wanted to be, but my friends merely laughed. You, Hedda, were one of the few who didn't laugh.

Lee to Press Tenant Aid Bill

which yielded no substantial part of his income, could buy a farm on the same terms. Farmers with mortgages now hanging over their heads could have them refinanced on these terms.

Preventive, Remedial

"The object of the bill," Lee declared, "is to prevent farm owners from becoming tenants as well as to help tenants become farm owners."

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, who with Lee is leading the fight for the bill, said a short time ago that the $300,000,000 tenant loan plan in the lending program would supersede the Lee bill. The lending program calls for self-liquidating loans to tenants totaling this amount over a two-year period.

Lee said, however, that in order to attack the tenant problem on a desirable scale, it will be necessary to enact his plan as well as that carried in the lending program.

Lee and Bankhead, it is understood, plan to call the Lee bill up in the Senate at the earliest possible moment. It has already been reported favorably by the Agriculture Committee. Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, is behind the proposal in the lower chamber. Passage by both houses is believed possible if the Senate becomes involved in a debate over neutrality legislation.

County Boards Provided

The Lee bill amends the Bankhead-Jones act. The county committees of three farmers each provided for by the original act would appraise farms under the new plan subject to check by the Farm Security Administration.

Sales and purchases would clear through these committees. But members of the committees would be forbidden to help any of their kinfolk sell or buy. City slickers trying to buy farms under the plan would have to get the county committee's approval.

The bill sets up an insurance fund amounting to 5 per cent of the $40,000,000 voted for the tenant program for the current fiscal year. This would total only $2,000,000. There is some question whether it would be an appropriation and therefore should originate in the House. There would be no premium charge for insurance, however.

U. S. Guarantee

If a farm buyer fell six months in arrears, the Secretary of Agriculture could issue a 3 per cent Government-guaranteed debenture to the holder of the mortgage, which would be taken off his hands. He thus would have a Government security paying more than long-term bonds now being sold by the Treasury.

If the buyer fell into arrears because of a bad crop, cash could be paid to the holder of the mortgage, and the Government would collect from the farmer. Provision is made for loans to buyers by the Farm Security Administration to enable them to meet principal and interest payments on mortgages.

Limit Temporary

The bill sets a $350,000,000 limit on the amount of mortgages which may be insured at any one time. Lee said plans are to insure $50,000,000 of mortgages during the current fiscal year if the bill is passed, $100,000,000 in the next fiscal year, and $200,000,000 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1942.

But the $350,000,000 limit is intended only as a start, he declared. If the plan works out all right, an effort will be made to increase the total. Money also would have to be appropriated later for an adequate insurance fund.

Administration expenses necessary to carry out the program would be borne by the Farm Security Administration. The Secretary of Agriculture would act as collection agent for the holder of the mortgage for all amounts due him from the farm buyer.

Legislator Dies

REPRESENTATIVE GRISWOLD.

Rep. Griswold Dies At Auto Wheel

An investigation of the reason the body was left so long at the scene was abandoned when this was explained.

Mr. Griswold was serving his first term in the House, where he was a member of the Rivers and Harbors Committee. He served from 1932 to 1936 in the Wisconsin State Senate and from 1912 to 1929 as a member of the West Salem, Wis., school board.

Mr. Griswold was born May 19, 1886, on a farm near West Salem which he operated until his death. He took a prominent part in farm activities, being a member of several stock breeders' associations. He served as president of the Guernsey Breeders Association and the La Crosse County Breeders.

Besides his wife, Mr. Griswold leaves four daughters, Mary Sybil, Jennie, Alice and Beulah, and a son, Donald.

Aid To The Enemy

When Secretary Ickes called upon President Roosevelt to run for a third term the question was raised as to whether he spoke with the consent and approval of the President. But no one will surmise that the Chief Executive had any knowledge of the speech in which Senator Guffey allied himself with the third-term movement. If the President listened to the speech, his first concern may well be to divorce himself from some of the sentiments expressed.

In effect, Senator Guffey told the American people that they would elect President Roosevelt again in 1940, or else——! The Guffey thesis is that the Supreme Court vetoed the President's first term and "his second term was stolen by Tories and political ingrates." But that won't happen again. "If the Tory politicians and the big business magnates succeed in bamboozling the American people for a third time, in 1940," the Senator declared, "then there's going to be an upheaval which will sweep away all politicians and all big business."

This rash prediction or threat was followed by talk of civil war and dictatorship if the group which Senator Guffey calls "the people" does not have its way. Only the most vitriolic critics of the Administration have assumed that the election of President Roosevelt for four more years in the White House would destroy our democratic system. But Mr. Guffey's talk of revolution, if opponents of the New Deal win, suggests that government by the majority is already in danger.

Probably few were surprised to hear the Pennsylvania solon speak in such irresponsible terms. But when he brings forth arguments so closely akin to fascism in defense of a third term, sponsors of that movement may well be alarmed. They know that the cry of dictatorship will be raised against the draft-Roosevelt movement in any event. With one of their own number declaring, in effect, that an upheaval would follow defeat of the New Deal, they are in the position of having turned over a vast store of ammunition to the enemy.

Here's A Rowdy-Do!

Possibly you have noted the increase in extracurricular activity in the major league ball parks these last few days.

Saturday at Detroit, for instance, there was the exchange of compliments at first base. Not to put too fine a point on it, Mr. Greenberg, of the Tigers, took a lusty poke at Mr. Kuhel, of the White Sox, but this was only by way of advising Mr. Kuhel not to be so free and easy with his spikes. Before very much blood could be spilled both teams rushed to the field and separated the combatants. But by that time the fans had entered into the spirit of the thing and began heaving pop bottles in the direction of the White Sox dugout.

President Harridge of the American League, something of a stickler for decorum, sent Mr. Greenberg notice of a $50 fine. He also intrusted Manager Jimmie Dykes of the White Sox to remind his boys that soft answers have been known to turn away wrath. Much impressed, Mr. Dykes decided Sunday to put the boys out of temptation's way; he sent all his players, save those actually engaged on the field, out to pick daisies in the centerfield bullpen. Alas, for good intentions! As early as the fourth inning Mr. Dykes was himself banished, with two of his players, for objecting too eloquently to a called third strike.

Meanwhile there were violent doings in New York and Philadelphia. At the Polo Grounds Messrs. Bonura, of the Giants, and Durocher, of the Dodgers, delighted 51,435 fans with an exhibition that appears to have combined the best features of wrestling, slugging and adagio dancing. The umpires who put an end to it were rewarded by a shower of bottles.

At Shibe Park, Manager Casey Stengel of the Boston Bees walked out of his dugout and punched Mr. Merrill May, of the Phillies, neatly on the nose. Then Mr. May—evidently the kind of fellow who can take a hint—plastered Mr. Stengel twice upon the mouth.

Now the ironic thing is that all these sudden and wholly deplorable outbursts of primordial passion among the baseball brethren were accompanied by an equally sudden and altogether gratifying upswing in the attendance figures. The number of paying customers in the parks this week-end was by far the largest in what has not been a very satisfactory season. On Sunday at the Polo Grounds and at Wrigley Field, Chicago, they were actually turning 'em away.

You may say what you please about this coincidence. You may say that it merely illustrates anew the depravity of human nature; or the decadence of the times. Or you may say that at last the boys have begun to take their work seriously. Or you may say that the baseball managers have belatedly decided to take a leaf out of the wrestling promoters' notebooks.

Or you may simply feel sorry for the umpires who have to contend with such problems. But if things have come to a point where we feel sorry for umpires, we might as well close up the parks entirely.

The Go Sign

The neutrality bill as passed by the House last week is some improvement over the existing measure. In particular, it modifies the present mandatory embargo on the shipment to belligerents of "arms, ammunition and implements of war." The ban, in the event of outbreak of war, would be applicable only to what are vaguely described as "lethal weapons." Airplanes, for all their death-dealing qualities, could seemingly be exported.

Airplanes are an implement of war of which the British and French would stand in great need, should they let themselves be forced into hostilities by further aggression on the part of the Berlin-Rome axis. Assuming continued control of the seas by the democratic allies, they would, under the House bill, be able to supplement their own air resources. And removal of the ban on airplane shipments seems the more impressive because Great Britain and France are in a position to meet most of their needs for arms and ammunition.

Nevertheless, the Administration's failure to get the entire embargo removed has aroused enthusiasm in Italy and Germany; gloom in France and Great Britain. The dictatorships regard the House action as a friendly gesture from the United States. The democracies feel that it is directed against them. And regardless of how blameless and patriotic the motives in Congress, both camps in Europe are correct in these assumptions.

The failure to remove all trace of mandatory embargo from the neutrality legislation is clearly advantageous to the Berlin-Rome alliance. It continues the revision of international law in the interests of Hitler and Mussolini and, at a most critical period, it gives tacit encouragement to these dictators to proceed with their expansionist plan. The tragedy is that here in America there is so little realization of the unneutral nature of this so-called neutrality.

Soviet Russia, whether or not intentionally, has already given much aid and comfort to Hitler by its curious reluctance to join the anti-aggression bloc which Great Britain and France have sponsored. But the Congress of the United States is dealing these two democracies a far more serious blow. For all that the Anglo-French alliance wants of this country is restoration of that right to purchase arms which has always automatically accompanied the possession of sea power. And it is that right which is now pointedly curtailed for Great Britain and France.

With Russian support withheld and the United States, in effect, favoring the axis, it seems dubious that the British and French will risk hostilities over a Nazi seizure of Danzig, or over whatever other coup may come next on Hitler's calendar.

The possibility that planes might be forthcoming from this country is not enough encouragement for London and Paris to take the awful risk of war. Of course, there will be no admission from London or Paris to that effect. But Hitler needs no formal admission. He is quite shrewd enough to judge for himself as to the combined effect of Russian and of American policy on Anglo-French morale.

Ironically enough, it may therefore happen that the House action, plus the strength of isolationist sentiment in the Senate, will help to avert immediate war. But the bitterness lies in the expectation that this would again be purchasing peace by surrender, at the cost of further acquisitions in aggression. Nor will any rational person suppose that the scheduled seizure of Danzig, whether unresisted or accompanied by the destruction of Poland, would be the end of the democratic retreat.

Both in Russia and in the United States there was much criticism of the Munich settlement, which paved the way for the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia. But Russia and the United States, in their separate ways, are now paving the way for another Munich. And for this forthcoming Munich which is threatened the responsibility would be readily defined.

If the United States actually decides to give aggression the all-clear signal, it will not be the fault of the Administration. Both the President and Secretary Hull have done all they can to make clear that the future of civilization depends very largely on the direction in which the present Congress throws the tremendous weight of the United States.

In spite of these efforts the great influence of America is, on the whole, still being directed to encourage the spread of aggression. That this should be the case is a major tragedy of history, and one with much ultimate bearing on our own security.

Washington's Crisis

The deadlock in Congress over both the District appropriation and tax bills must be regarded as something more than an unfortunate incident. Failure of the Senate and House to reconcile their differences in accord with the customary procedure indicates a breakdown of Congressional government for the Nation's Capital.

In spite of many controversies between the two houses of Congress, appropriation bills for the numerous branches of the Federal Government were passed without serious difficulty. Conferees were able to iron out wide differences in many cases, because each house recognized the necessity of compromising to make legislation possible. Our system of government could not operate if one branch of Congress were not willing to meet the other branch halfway. Indeed, where the bicameral system exists compromise is the essence of democracy.

But in the case of the District, the House has stubbornly refused to compromise. It refuses to budge from its position that the District should not receive more than $5,000,000 from the Federal Treasury. The Senate thinks the Federal payment should amount to more than $8,000,000 and that it should be adjusted each year in accord with the percentage of the District's land area exempted from taxation through Federal ownership. But the Senate is willing to compromise to end the dispute. Only the House clings doggedly to its original proposition.

In effect, the House is attempting to deny the right of the Senate to exercise an equal voice in legislation for the Capital City. That attitude is inexcusably arbitrary. It suggests that in dealing with District matters the House is not willing to abide by the customary democratic procedure. In these circumstances the Senate has only the alternatives of leaving the Capital in a grave financial predicament or of yielding to dictation.

Continuation of the impasse would cripple the District government. Until the appropriation bill is passed the Commissioners can not fix the tax rate on real estate. And, of course, if that rate can not be fixed no tax bills can be sent out and no revenue from this major source can be collected.

Congress might enact a continuing resolution to permit the payment of salaries and other operating expenses on the basis prevailing last year. But that would not clear up the revenue dilemma. And since public improvements and numerous other items can not be effected by a continuing resolution, recourse to that device would provide nothing more than a temporary easing of the District's crisis.

More than any event in recent years, this prolonged scrap over the District should force Congress to the conclusion that it is incompetent to legislate for the Capital. At best only a few members of the House understand the issues at stake in the two District bills on which they have taken such a determined stand. Yet they even refuse to follow the lead of their own colleagues who have the responsibility of shaping District legislation. In these circumstances the arguments for creation of a District government competent to handle its own routine legislative problems becomes overwhelming.

Deserved Recognition

During the past two years no naval officer has had a more difficult task than that which has confronted Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet.

That post was never a sinecure. But the difficulties and dangers connected with it have enormously increased since the outbreak of the undeclared Sino-Japanese war in July, 1937. Upon Admiral Yarnell's shoulders have rested no small part of the responsibility for protecting American interests in the danger zones. He has performed that task with skill, courage and statesmanship of the highest order.

It would be a wholly fitting recognition of the great service he has rendered this Nation, if, in accordance with the recommendation of the Navy Department, Congress should award Admiral Yarnell the Distinguished Service Medal. No award could be better deserved. Sea dog and diplomat, Admiral Yarnell has lived up to the best traditions of the Navy. On his retirement later this month he will be able to look back upon a record of which any man might well be proud.

Moral Rearmament

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have read with great interest and appreciation the positive news which The Washington Post has carried regarding the recent advance that moral rearmament is making in America.

This Fourth of July has given us cause to think more seriously than ever about the future of our country. This is the day when we celebrate our freedom.

And yet, what proportion of our Nation is really free? We are bound by fear of encroaching war. We are pressed down with the weight of debts and taxes—we pay $127 a year per capita for crime; millions of dollars go into battleships. Other millions go into hospitals and institutions for the insane. All the while we know that slowly and certainly the forces of chaos are creeping up on us.

Meanwhile, our money goes up into the air in fireworks of marvelous display and color, and our thoughts and feelings go off with the fireworks in flurries of patriotism. But when we look away from the brilliant light of the fireworks, we must face the old enemy of fear which lurks there in the darkness. Most of us feel insecure about the future.

I feel that in this dark picture the light of a great hope is beginning to shine. Moral rearmament is a positive force which is remaking men and nations and is the only force I know of that is adequate to meet the fast advancing enemy of chaos. Thousands are finding in it the answer to fear, the answer for breken homes, and the conflict between classes and nations.

Moral rearmament has as its program the building of a new world, by changing the people in it. Along with the huge citizens' meetings for moral rearmament in Madison Square Garden and Constitution Hall, a call went out to the positive forces in every walk of life to unite against the real enemy. Our President sent that call around the world as he urged the nations to rearm morally. Secretary of War Woodring said: "Moral rearmament deepens and strengthens that love of country without which no nation is secure."

It is the beginning. I feel that a great battle is ahead if we are to win in this fight against chaos. As our people see that this battle for peace is the greatest battle of all time, they are responding with greater sacrifice than they did during the World War. Already some have sold heirlooms, and given of their savings to advance this battle. For instance, all the money and manpower which goes into fireworks, if turned into building new lives, a new nation and gaining real freedom, could transform the nations in a few months and might be the thing which will prevent war. People will sacrifice when they see a cause big enough to sacrifice for.

Suggestions For Job Seekers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I recently met a young man just out of high school. His accumulated knowledge was limited to the four walls of the classroom. I conversed with him for some time and, although intelligent, he disclosed a lack of information on things of the world outside. His studies had brought him face to face with problems confined to textbooks where diligence and application find the answers.

He now stands on the threshold of an entirely different situation. Business enterprise is well organized and its ramifications extend into numerous highly specialized lines. This is the blueprint he must learn to read and search for his place or decide on a choice. Qualifications and ability is his stock in trade and self-analysis and organization the prime factors to the task of obtaining a job. It must be done by orderly methods and will necessitate hours of planning and ceaseless effort, but the final outcome will be an adequate reward.

The field of employment is large and production in all lines is on the upward trend; promotions are being made continually, changes in personnel occur regularly and the demand for help increases. In the quest for a position, a good rule is to consult a telephone directory and make a list of all business concerns in the community. Many of them have an employment service department and after a personal interview with a prospect has been granted, an application in writing is generally required.

A well-written letter is an art in itself and the utmost pains must be taken when writing it. This must be done in a businesslike way, the simple rules of grammar employed and the facts clearly presented. A second interview may secure a position.

A reliable employment agency is a practical clearing house for placements, where personal contacts with job-seekers and a thorough discussion of one's attributes, adaptations and ambitions will classify him as a unit and registration may result in a call at any time to a suitable vocation.

The classified columns of daily newspapers offer many opportunities and should be carefully read. The help wanted advertisements are usually inserted by busy employers who haven't the time to interview a large number of applicants, but will judge the writer by the tone of his letter. It is advisable to pick out those which are best suited to one's adaptability.

A fitness for the position should be plainly stated, religious affiliation mentioned and each qualification asked for in the advertisement replied to in full. The situation wanted advertisement is a valuable asset and all possible care should be taken when writing it. Age, education, capability, experience and the kind of work desired must be fully described. If one possesses any special ability or has directed his studies along some particular line, refer to it in the advertisement, as it will strengthen the appeal. Sufficient space should be used and a reasonable amount of publicity given.

When granted an interview with a prospective employer, the applicant must appear at his best and be courteous, confident and collected. All questions should be answered in a straightforward manner, with the impression that an opportunity rather than a position is sought, and when finished the employer should be thanked for the interview. Herein an attempt has been made to offer a few suggestions on how to look for a position—an important problem that concerns the young man just out of school.

Gambling In Wheat

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The few editorials that I have seen on the alleged defalcations of Dr. James Monroe Smith, former president of Louisiana State University, have laid the blame on bad political conditions in that State. Your own editorial goes so far as to give our educational system a clean bill of health. You seem to regard crookedness on the part of educators as exceptional and novel. I quote from your editorial of last Firday, June 30, as to the Dr. Smith case: "Its novel and spectacular features merely serve to emphasize the need of a thoroughgoing political house cleaning in that State."

While I doubt not the need of "political house cleaning in that State" and in many other States, I feel that the real fault lies in our educational system. Our leaders in education have much to do with the formation of public opinion and molding the norms of human conduct. I am unable to believe that our country would be in its present plight if there had been proper leadership in our schools and colleges.

Specifically as to the Dr. Smith case, this tragedy could never have happened if the schools and colleges had taught the truth about futures trading and the evils of playing the futures market. Yet our teachers and our editors have led us to believe that playing the futures market is a perfectly legitimate thing to do.

The plain truth is that it is nothing but a gambling on price fluctuations. One who "buys" a wheat futures contract acquires no title to nor property in any wheat, despite the deceitful wording of the "contract." Neither does one who "sells" a wheat futures contract convey any title or property whatever. "Buyers" and "sellers" alike merely bet on a chance to win on a rise or fall, respectively, of the price of wheat. They deposit the same stakes (margins) for the sole purpose of betting. It is what the courts call "gambling under the forms of trade."

If our teachers and our editors would tell the public the truth about future trading, this nefarious racket would soon blow up. Yet they applaud the practice of playing the futures market, and they play it themselves without compunction of conscience!

I have before me the figures of occupational groups that had "open contracts" in wheat futures and corn futures on the Chicago Board of Trade on September 29, 1934. There are about 600 occupations in the list, many of which represent over 1,000 accounts, and they run from abstractors to yeast makers, including physicians (523), attorneys (397), teachers (163) and clergymen (25). I omit the editors.

Can anyone seriously contend that these people were doing, or intending to do, anything other than to bet on price changes? Our teachers and our editors have made this evil practice respectable. The only "novel and spectacular feature" about the Dr. Smith case is that he got in so deep he couldn't get out without getting caught.

The Post Impressionist

How To Tell The Good People From The Bad People

It's all this uncertainty that makes you dyspeptic after your breakfast. We live in a world of Nazis, Fascists, businessmen, carpenters, bakers, bankers, bricklayers, Democrats, Republicans, Frenchmen, Englishmen, Turks, Navajos, Germans, Swedes, Japanese, capitalists, proletarians, robber barons, merchants of death, underfed and underhoused thirds, democracies and dictatorships, any one class of which may be good people in the morning and bad people by evening.

The issue is not that of individual preference. If you personally dislike any group because of its color, race, creed, political opinion or degree of wealth or poverty, you can let it alone. That is the theory on which the United States has operated happily for a hundred and fifty years. The problem of the good people and the bad people is distinct; it involves a moral obligation to do something about it and them.

Good people and bad people appeared in our country fairly recently—about 1860. Those particular good people and bad people built or dug some fine battlefields, but later intermarried and disappeared. The factions which followed them were more diverse and complicated in their goodness and badness, and require more exhaustive treatment.

Elsewhere in the world there have always been good and bad people. What made them good or bad is a question on which we will be lucky to get the slightest reliable information without long research directed toward that one end. An examination of the circumstances is the most we can hope to accomplish here.

It is impossible to determine, at this late date, whether the Java ape men were good people. They were different from us, however, and thus subject to suspicion. Among the Peking men it is obvious that there were good people and bad people, for some Peking men ate other Peking men. It is very likely that while the Cro-Magnon men were driving the Neanderthal men out of the Neanderthal, the Cro-Magnons were bad people. Their superior intelligence made it possible for them to be much more objectionable to the Neanderthals than the Neanderthals were to them. Once the conquest was completed, however, the superior intelligence of the Cro-Magnons made them good people and the Neanderthals, of necessity, were bad people.

There have been long periods when it was perfectly clear who the good people were. In one age, for example, the Greeks were the good people and all others were bad people; in another, the Romans were the good people and all others were bad. In modern times, an extension of halcyon days occurred when the British and their friends were the good people. In Victoria's reign it was not admitted openly that any civilized nation could be composed of bad people; and all others were delicately referred to as the White Man's Burden. It probably was the most comfortable era in history.

The rest of England's story, however, is quite different. England at one time was inhabited largely by Celts. The Angles, Saxons and Jutes, who may have been good people in their own circles, fought the good people of England and thereby became bad people, temporarily at least. The Angles, Saxons and Jutes bested the Celts, whereupon the Celts migrated to Ireland and became bad people. They remained bad people until the nineteenth century, when they sailed to the United States, conquered certain parts of it and became good people.

In the meantime, though, things were being disturbed again in England. William the Conqueror, who in 1066 was undoubtedly the worst person of all, brought over some Normans and took charge of the affairs of the Angles, Saxons and such Jutes as remained. Since the Normans were relatively few in number, they did not drive the Angles and Saxons to Ireland, but kept them to till the soil. Historically this was a mistake, for it delayed the Normans' establishment as good people. They were saved only by the fact that they stayed in England and had a great many descendants, especially William.

Now that our investigation has gone this far, we should be able to draw some tentative conclusions. Of course it is obvious that any group opposed to the status quo is composed of bad people. Ironically we may add to our meagre knowledge of the subject this principle:

Historically, it is always the conqueror who is right, for it is his ideas which prevail.

Thus all successful commanders, from Genghis Khan to Foch, with their followers, may be added to our list of good people. It should be noted carefully, however, that their status is never clearly defined until after they become conquerors; before that they may be, and very likely are, the very worst of bad people. Afterward the conquered become bad people. The only occasion on which this rule failed to apply was in the American Civil War, after which the North let the South go on printing its own history books. America, however, is different—at any rate, it used to be.

Atheism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"The fool hath said there is no God." But the man that claims to be a confirmed "atheist" knows down deep in his soul there is a God. There is something within himself that rebels against such an assertion.

One way of proving the existence of God, is through atheistic communism itself.

Atheistic communism, whose headquarters is in Russia, is spending millions of dollars in propaganda work, to set up a Godless society; in short, to banish God out of the hearts, souls and minds of men. They are endeavoring to foster their false philosophy of life on other nations, including the United States. The vast amount of money they are spending, the organization work they are doing, the large propaganda agencies they are establishing, educational work, etc, is one of the strongest arguments in favor of the existence of God.

If there is no God, as they claim, why go to all the expense of banishing something out of the world that doesn't exist?

McNutt Returns

By Ernest K. Lindley

Curiosity Quickened

PAUL V. McNUTT is back to make his final reports before resigning as High Commissioner to the Philippines. His record out there will be sized up carefully in Washington because he is in the 1940 Presidential picture. That is, he will have a block of delegates and probably some second and third choice support from other delegates.

His vow of loyalty to his "chief" and his declaration that he will not be a candidate if the President wants a third term has softened the hostility of the New Deal crowd and quickened their curiosity. They are beginning to ask each other whether McNutt might "do" if the President doesn't run again and if, as now seems probable, they are unable to nominate anyone from their own intimate circle.

The only incident in McNutt's Philippine experience which received much publicity in the American press was his order, shortly after his arrival more than two years ago, that he be toasted before the President of the Philippines. To the untutored eye of the American man on the street it sounded like a ridiculous matter of personal vanity.

To clear up the record the facts should be stated. Soon after McNutt reached Manila he attended a reception given by the Japanese consul general in honor of the Emperor Hirohito's birthday. The Japanese consul general first offered a toast to the Emperor. Then he toasted jointly the President of the Philippines and the President of the United States. Finally he toasted the American High Commissioner.

McNutt's Position On Toast Correct

McNUTT PROMPTLY made public a note informing the world at large that under the organic act granting independence to the Philippines, the Untied States retained sovereignty over the islands until July 4, 1946. He said it was proper for the first toast to be given in honor of the head of the nation in whose honor the party was being given, but that the next toast should be given to the President of the United States alone. If further toasts were offered, he said, they should be to the High Commissioner of the United States and the President of the Philippines, in that order.

McNutt's position was correct, and had the full support of authorities. Much more than an empty formality was at stake. In a section of the world where "face" counts heavily, it was important to serve notice that the United States would tolerate no indignity, no nibbling away of its prestige. If the incident had occurred a few months later, McNutt probably would have been applauded in this country for administering a rebuke to the Japanese consul general.

If the editorial comments in the Manila press, the account of the Manila correspondent of the New York Times, and the reports of a few officials here who follow Philippine affairs closely can be taken at even half of face value, McNutt has been a bang-up success.

President Quezon is quoted as saying that McNutt is the first representative of American sovereignty who has won completely both the Filipinos and the Americans in the Philippines.

He is also the first American representative openly to advocate the retention of the Philippines under the American flag. This is in accord with the drift of opinion in the Philippines, in the presence of rampant Japanese imperialism. But it is not the popular side of the question in the United States. The fact that McNutt has taken a bold position, when he could have steered clear of trouble by keeping silent, indicates that he is not a run-of-the-mine politician.

Manila Papers Pay Him Tribute

BUT EVEN the Manila papers which disagree with McNutt on this basic point of policy pay glowing tribute to him and his administration. The Philippines Herald, for example, applauds his charm, tact, sincerity and intellectual honesty," and his "great service to Philippine popular government." Apparently McNutt has talked more about democracy and what it means in practice than any representative we have had out there. The Philippines Herald compares his educational work in behalf of democracy in the Philippines Commonwealth to "the mission of men like Sun Yat Sen, Bismarck and Washington."

The paper La Vanguardia, which also disagrees with McNutt about the future role of the United States in the Philippines, praises him for his sincere co-operation with the officials of the Commonwealth and for maintaining in a higher manner the ideals of democracy.

Another writer dubs him "Apostle of Democracy," and adds: "The amazing thing is that he has opened the eyes of the people to the difference between apparent and true democracy; they are on the qui vive and scan closely everything likely to pass for democracy."

The Manila Bulletin, which agrees with McNutt on the future of the Philippines, says he is too competent and too familiar with the Philippine problem and the Far Eastern crisis to be spared from Manila unless he is moved into the White House.

Manila gave him a touching farewell, with plenty of cheers and tears. Enough has been heard about them here to assure that McNutt will receive more than a cursory inspection when he arrives in Washington.

Daladier, Gamelin Rule France

Politician And Soldier In Power As Meek Parliament Goes Home

By T. W. Wilson, Jr.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE FRENCH PARLIAMENT has folded up meekly and gone home until November or until recalled to Paris for a job nobody hopes it will have to do—declare war. For the rest of the summer, at least, the cabinet will rule by decree. During that time, and perhaps longer, two men will bear the heaviest responsibility borne by any Frenchmen since 1918. One is a politician and the other a soldier.

THE FIRST is, by this time, well known abroad. He is Edouard Daladier, premier and minister for national defense—a stocky, square-jawed, silent man of modest background, who has been buffeted for years by the crosswinds of political fortune that blow more unpredictably in France than anywhere else in the world.

Daladier is neither the weak-kneed traitor of the people he was accused of being after the bloody riots in February, 1935, nor is he the infallible "strong man" he is said to be today. He is a fairly crafty politician and an extraordinarily able minister for war. But far more important than either of these, he is a Frenchman, which, with his nation at last united behind him, means that France comes first, last and always in his calculations, and decisions. Only one who has lived in France can know what this means.

THE OTHER MAN—the soldier—is not so well known abroad. But his name is revered in the homes of France. No further proof of this need be cited than to say that France has conferred upon him the greatest power ever handed over to a military man since the days of Napoleon Bonaparte, for since that time the French have been extremely wary of men in uniform. He is 66-year-old Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, recently named commander in chief of national defense—a title unknown in the military hierarchy until several weeks ago, a position the very existence of which is contrary to the tradition of the Third Republic.

In placing Gamelin in this position the French cabinet paid him a tribute not only as a soldier but as a man who can be trusted. For it is to be doubted that even in times of such dire emergency as the present the French would have turned over so much authority to an army officer unless they were convinced that he would not abuse it, and that he had no political ambitions and no interests save the interests of France.

Until recently it was assumed in military circles that in event of war Gamelin would be the man chosen to lead the combined British and French armies. He may yet do so in that contingency. His present position, however, puts him in supreme command of plans for co-ordination and integrating the mobilization and war plans of all three branches of national defense—army, navy and air force—and he might be retained in some such capacity if the war dogs are loosed over Europe again. In that event Gen. Gamelin's successor as chief of staff of the army, Gen. Alphonse Joseph Georges, would probably head the combined land forces.

GAMELIN, as supreme head of what most impartial military critics still regard as the greatest army in the world, is probably Europe's outstanding soldier. He is credited in some quarters as being the greatest living master of military strategy and tactics. He is the ultimate chief of what some observers have classed as the greatest general staff in French history.

But for all his authority and all his reputation in military circles, Gamelin is a rather retiring man of few words and quiet demeanor. He is precise, methodical and systematic. There is nothing of the bombastic saber-rattler in his make-up. A learned scholar of military history and strategy, he is said to know by heart the most minute detail of every one of Napoleon Bonaparte's campaigns. In these characteristics he embodies some of the amazing aptitudes for scholarship exhibited from time to time by French army officers.

GAMELIN'S NAME is respected in the capitals of Europe and he is reported to have made a tremendous impression when he visited London several weeks ago, although many in the British cabinet and war office already knew him.

This writer discussed Gen. Gamelin with the military attache of a foreign power in Paris during the height of the crisis over the Czech Sudetenland in the middle of last September. He spoke of him in approximately the following words:

"Since I have been in France (three years) I have watched a remarkable improvement in the French army—in morale, training, equipment, preparedness—in every way. This has been all the more remarkable because it has been unspectacular. New equipment and new theories have been adopted cautiously, taking the best of the new and retaining the best of the old. In mechanization, for instance, the French army has proceeded slowly, avoiding the mistakes and the headaches of a wholesale program of immediate change-over.

"I have tried to track down all these developments and almost all of them have led to the same place—Gamelin. As far as I can make out, he is almost solely responsible for a careful, sound, thorough, steady improvement throughout the French army.

"I have been with Gamelin on maneuvers and I have evolved the highest possible admiration for him as a soldier and as a man. The same opinion is held by everyone who knows him, and that includes the military attaches of Germany, Italy and almost every other country. In all my experience I have never known a chief of staff anywhere who didn't have his enemies—either among his fellow officers, his men or other acquaintances. But I have been asking questions for three years, and never yet have I heard a single criticism of Gamelin."

These are high words of praise, but the general opinion expressed seems to be held with remarkable unanimity in military circles.

WHILE GAMELIN is anything but a war-monger, he had his very definite opinions about the British-French capitulation at Munich last September. There was a story going around European capitals last fall that when Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet flew to London to get a first-hand report from Prime Minister Chamberlain of his visit with Hitler at Godesberg, word began to leak back that the conferees had decided to forsake Czecho-Slovakia. The story goes that Gamelin suddenly flew to London not at Daladier's request, as the official version had it, but at his own insistence, so he could tell the British war office personally that with Czecho-Slovakia as an ally the French were confident they could defeat Germany and do it in short order but that with the Czech army and defense thrown overgoard they could make no promises one way or the other and regarded the outcome of a war on that basis as highly doubtful

Whether the story is true or false is unknown to this writer. But he is in a position to state flatly that the opinion attributed to Gamelin did represent the attitude of the French general staff at that time. When final word of the British-French decision to abandon Czecho-Slovakia came from London the French war office called in the military attaches of several friendly foreign governments and gave them an earful to that effect. Officials of the war office were apparently thunderstruck and in the heat of the shock frankly said they had been sold down the river by their own government.

WHATEVER the opinion of the general staff today regarding the conference of Munich, Gen. Gamelin has the complete confidence of the French government and the French public. He is one of the two most important men in France today. On his decisions may hang the chances of victory or defeat of the democratic armies if war breaks out in Europe this summer.

Transatlantic Flight

Scene—Airport at Port Washington, L. I. A clipper plane is about to take off for another one-day flight to Europe.

Mate (to skipper)—Are we all set?

Skipper—Yes, but I'm a little dizzy on this route. Are we going to Europe or coming back?

Mate—I'm not positive. It's pretty confusing.

A steward (to chef)—Is lunch nearly ready?

Chef—We're serving yesterday's lunch.

Steward—We can't do that, can we?

Chef—Why not? It's still hot.

A passenger (about to board plane with wife)—Hurry, dear.

Wife—What's the idea rushing me like this?

Passenger—We are apt to miss this plane.

Wife—what of it? There'll be another along in a minute!

Second passenger (recognizing a friend)—Well, so you're going abroad at last! You said you were too busy.

Friend—I found I could get away from the office for a couple of days, and decided to see Europe.

Passenger—Why not take an extra day and see Asia?

Second lady passenger (quite irritated.)—No; it's my fourth.

First Lady Passenger—My goodness! Do you find it that absorbing?

Second lady passenger—Certainly not. I just can't get off.

First lady passenger—Why not?

Second lady passenger—I don't have time to pack before the darned plane takes off again.

A mother (to daughter)—Goodby, Jennie. Be a good girl while I'm gone.

Jennie—Don't 'worry, mother. Before I can even get to a telephone you'll we wiring me that you're back again.

Mother—Here's a letter from me.

Jesnnie (a bit puzzled—A letter?

Mother—Yes, there's so little time to write it during a trip to Europe I thought I'd write it before I started. It tells you all about the trip.

Jennie—But you haven't made the trip.

Mother—That's all right. It tells the whole story in eight words, "Took off. Had cup of tea. Arrived O. K."

An excitable gent (rushing up too late)—Is that tomorrow's plane?

No Surprise

Ideologies To Order

Most of the space in Melvin Rader's "No Compromise" (Macmillan, $3.50), is an exposition of the "ideology" of fascism. As fascism, or Nazism, has been proudly asserted to be "anti-rational" by some of its prominent supporters, it seems rather a thankless task to discover or discuss a philosophy for it; but on the other hand, strict reason is bound to suppose that even anti-rationalism must have had some cause and origin, or to complete the paradox, some reason for its embodied existence. And the anti-rationalists, unfettered by logic, naturally may assert anything they please if they feel like defending their position in words, though such defense is superfluous if the club prevails, and futile if it does not.

The "ideology" was created after the fact, Mr. Rader explains, or patched together from scraps of "Bergson's theory of the superiority of instinct and intuition. Spengler's preference for the more romantic and activistic phases of culture, Papini's exaggerated interpretation of the pragmatism of William James," with incidental contributions from Machiavelli, D'Annunzio, Maurras, Barres, Gentile, and even Wagner, Treitschke, Fichte, and the German romantics in general.

Mr. Rader then refutes this doctrine of force, by calling upon thinkers of an opposite tradition, including the Founding Fathers of the United States. Mr. Rader holds, however, that the latter need to be brought up to date. "The Constitution," he affirms, "may be roughly divided into two main parts: the part concerned with the maintenance of property rights, and the part concerned with the maintenance of human rights. To some of our forefathers there seemed to be little or no conflict between these two parts."

THIS STATEMENT is either muddle or evasion. Not one of "our forefathers" who had a hand in framing the Constitution saw any conflict whatever on the point in question. They understood the English language well enough to realize that property is ownership; therefore, whatever rights are involved must be those of the owner, that is, human rights.

But Mr. Rader thinks that "a broader liberalism" has "something to learn from the Soviet constitution. This document not only provides for many of the civil rights with which we are familiar, but includes a novel list of rights." He waves aside the fact that we are familiar with our rights by possession and exercise of them, while they remain merely words under the Soviet constitution. "We shall not enter into hot dispute as to the extent of civil rights in the Soviet Union," he explains, but he insists they are nevertheless "a model for all liberals."

It would appear then that a set of "principles," which are not realized and cannot be realized because the only workable basis has been destroyed, is offered as "a model for all liberals," and no "liberal" will be so rude as to mention the fact that the aforesaid principles don't work.

However, if anyone should be so lacking in tact or "liberalism" as to dwell on this trifling detail, there is still a broader "liberalism" in reserve. "The program of liberalism, in a time of crisis, may have to be severely modified," by "the severe curtailment of the liberties of those whose principle is denial of the liberties of the majority."

Hitler got over a 90 per cent vote for a similar program of liberalism."

The incurable resemblance of fascism to communism is not at all remarkable. Fascism is the offspring of communism, and nothing else. Whatever pedigree fascism may furbish up, communism will gladly certify it; both of them are embarrassed by the relationship.

"FARMWARD MARCH," by William J. Hale (Coward-McCann, $2), starts an interesting theme, but wanders off to such strange conclusions, in such a cloud of wild and whirling words, one learns little of value from it. Mr. Hale purports to speak as a scientist, but the following sentence is a sample of his reasoning. "The scientically organized nations of today—Germany, Italy and Japan—are laughing at the namby-pamby chatter of Beelzebub and his sycophants, clamoring for peace on earth. . . . Perhaps a new Dark Age is in the making. At all events, the world must be made safe for scientifically administered national groups. The form of government is a triviality. . . . Let us seek the respect of authoritarian peoples that all together may work to the betterment of our fellow men. . . . Der Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, merits unstinted praise for what he has been able to accomplish for greater Germany in the face of vicious and contemptuous criticism from without. . . . The progress that has followed Hitler's efforts is due in no small degree to strictly scientific procedure."

One may wonder what that has to do with farming. Mr. Hale is an exponent of chemurgy; he foresees a new industrial revolution from the development of chemical processes to utilize products of the soil. The substitution or complementary use of "agricrude" alcohol for petroleum products, and the extended adaptation of cellulose materials for many purposes, may well be the next form of "industrial revolution." Also, this change might conceivably bring about a balance between the land and the machine. But where does Hitler come in? I don't know.

Indeed, in terms of science, the release of new and incalculable energies is logically incompatible with any "authoritarian" government because such government is static and repressive, and cannot be otherwise. The expansive force of new energies calls for the maximum of freedom, to obviate explosion and chaos. But, it is idle to argue against the peculiar apocalyptic enthusiasm Mr. Hale manifests in such a paragraph as the following: "On January 30, 1933, Adolf Hitler came into power in Germany and with almost superhuman might has succeeded in building a new nation immune to the wiles of Beelzebub."

Antisedition And Alien Bill Held 'Dangerous'

Contending that alien and sedition legislation recently approved by the House contained "dangerous," undemocratic ideas," the National Emergency Conference urged members of the Senate yesterday to scrutinize the measures carefully before acting upon them.

The conference, formed in May to combat what it called "repressive" legislation, made its suggestions in an open letter to all Senators. The letter was signed by 33 educators, writers, artists and religious, labor and political leaders.

The Dempsey bill, the letter said, providing mandatory deportation of alien members of organizations which support any legislative proposal that might be construed as advocating "any change in the American form of government," would restrict the exercise of political opinion or action by religious, fraternal and labor organizations.

The McCormack rider, making a felony of "advocacy of overthrow of the government by force and violence," could be applied to organization, or advocacy of strikes, the letter contended.

Philatelists Urge 'Peace Stamp' on Visit of Royalty

Postmaster General Farley—just up for a breathing spell from controversies of the American baseball stamp—now is being asked to commemorate on postage the visit here of the British King and Queen, Washington philatelists told The Post yesterday.

The philatelists see the movement as a complete turn-about of history. They say the proposed "peace stamp" commemorating the visit would conclude a cycle begun when the Colonies, in 1765, rebelled against the English stamp tax.

But, the philatelists point out, there is a law against placing the picture of a living person on United States postage. Tais militates also against those suggesting this "peace stamp," who would have the Canadian Government issue a companion stamp. This would commemorate how the United States treated the British rulers after they crossed the unique, unfortified frontier.

Mexican Films Suffer as Public Snoots Cowboys

Transition in public tastes from cowboy moving pictures to sophisticated social dramas has worked a hardship on the motion picture industry of Mexico, Commercial Attache T. H. Lockett, of Mexico City, reported to the Commerce Department yesterday.

It was fairly easy, in "the old days," for Mexican film companies to produce a "ranchero" picture, employing backdrops supplied by nature, regional costumes and popular Mexican folk songs.

Mexican moving picture companies are attempting to influence President Cardenas to tax foreign films, the report showed.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Husband's Grim Hold on Purse Strings Takes Joy Out of Life for Wife; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 27, married to a man 43 years of age. We have been married for four years and have a child a year old. We get along well except for money trouble. My husband is a Government employe and both of us come from a Western State. He takes charge of the money; claiming that the money he makes belongs to him only. I take very good care of him and the child, but if I ask for any change for my pocketbook, he goes up in the air. I have had scarcely a penny from him. He sees only that we get our meals and he always thinks of himself first. I come next.

Now, my problem is this: How can I get him to give me an allowance for the household and for my personal expenses? We have had quite a few small bills to meet and are still meeting them, but just the same, if he wants anything for himself, he gets it right away and baby and I must wait. I don't wish my folks to know how things really are with us, because my mother would worry too much.

I am old enough to stand on my own feet, but my husband knows that I cannot work outside the home because my health is poor. Should I try to stick it out with him for the remainder of my life? Or should I leave him? I am still in love with him and would like to make a go of things. Thank you for ny advice. Sincerely yours. TROUBLED.

Stubborn Trait

DEAR TROUBLED: A man's attitude toward money matters affords perhaps the clearest index of his essential character. The person who is pointlessly profligate with money is usually equally unstable in all his social and emotional transactions. The individual who is at once self indulgent and grudgingly tightfisted with others is, almost invariably, a man who regards himself as one-against-the-world; a person who has never been trained to a wholesome social adjustment; who distrusts everybody and who will always be meanly on the defensive against the fancied possibility of exploitation and abuse at the hands of every comer.

The third major type, the person who is financially competent yet casually open-handed, readily giving to others the same consideration he would instinctively expect for himself; who takes it for granted that money (as a symbol of usefulness and as a medium of exchange) exists, is acquired and passed on, for the sole purpose of investing his life, and the lives of his dependents or intimates, with tolerable grace, dignity and comfort—this type of person is sound to the core: his spirit is sturdy and generous, his mind intelligent and receptive, his emotions out-going and altogether kindly.

Unhappily for you, it appears that you have married a man who must be classified in the second-named category. And because his pettiness about money is unquestionably a reflection of a distorted spiritual or social outlook on life in general, it is extremely doubtful whether you can ever compel a fair deal at his hands. A man's character, at 43, is seldom amenable to drastic change. By that age (and particularly when he has married late) he is as set as granite in his ways; and when his ways are not generously sharing ways, he is straining against his very nature in giving at all. If and when he gives, usually it is with the idea of getting, or because he has no alternative.

However, since you love your husband in spite of his faults, have a child to consider and, moreover, lack the physical stamina (and perhaps the spiritual hardihood) so necessary for successfully changing horses in midstream, it probably will be best for you to reconcile yourself to the situation. All things considered, I believe your blessings outweigh your grievances. Surely you are much better off now than you would have been as an ailing spinster.

You have the emotional fulfillment, the prideful social consolations, of husband and child and a home of your own. You have the married woman's way of life. You have economic security, both now and for the future, such as you would not have if you were a divorcee on alimony pittance. I imagine, indeed, that if you were to be altogether truthful with yourself and with me, you would have to admit that you hav done about as well for yourself—through this marriage—as you could expect to do, considering the cards of personality and social efficiency which you hold.

Perfect New Dance Steps

Salute to the Britons as they glide smoothly along in the glamouous tango. Friends and fun come easily these days

But before they taught themselves to do the popular new dance steps they were as out of things as the stodgy Slows who watch wistfully from the sidelines.

A pity to get into the "settled state where social life's concerned, be too out-of-date to be asked to interesting parties, meet smart people. You can easily teach yourself popular dances from diagrams, be a popular guest at social.

The tango has you baffled? Well, its simple when you take it step by step, know the secret is to combine smooth glides of catlike precision with short quick steps and brief pauses.

What a difference then! You're invited to smart parties, feel at ease with the best dancers. Our 40-page booklet, "Teach Yourself the Latest Dance Steps," gives diagrams, instructions for basic steps, smart variations—in the tango, Westchester, fox trot, waltz, shag, conga, rumba. Tips on posture, leading and following make you an accomplished dancer.

All Dressed Up And Nowhere to Go

"Where are you going on vacation?"

"We simply can't decide. You see we've been everywhere almost."

"Why don't you run up to New York to the World's Fair?"

"Oh, everybody goes to the World's Fair."

"Well, why don't you go up to Lake Sylvan again?"

"Nobody goes there any more. They say that last summer the place was absolutely dead."

"I understand all the crowds are going to Bamboo Beach now."

"We did think about going there but—well they say the place is attracting a lot of the cheaper types of tourists."

"Everybody's seen the Grand Canyon."

"Well, you could go through the Northwest and see Banff and Lake Louise."

"We've seen Banff and we've seen Lake Louise."

"Have you ever seen Glacier Park?"

"No, but we've seen Yellowstone. When you've seen one of those parks you've seen them all."

"Say, a lot of people are going up to this new resort at Mount Nemo. They say it's wonderful scenery."

"I know, but a woman who was up there last summer told my sister-in-law the food wasn't very good."

"Well, if it's food you want, why don't you go on a boat? There's a lot of cruises——"

"We've been on most of the cruises. We've been on the Great Lakes . . . and to Bermuda . . . and the Caribbean . . . I can't see why on earth the steamship companies can't think of some new places to take people."

"I tell you! Go to the San Francisco World's Fair. That's new."

"Oh, but we've been in San Francisco. We spent a whole day there the last time we went West."

"Have you ever seen Colorado Springs?"

"Yes, we passed through there on the train."

"Say now, Mesa Verde National Park is a place I bet you've never seen."

"Yes, I saw it in the movies."

"Have you ever been to Hollywood?"

"No, but Hollywood's sort of old stuff now. I'd like to go to some really new place."

"Why don't you go to Quebec . . . and the Gaspe?"

"Oh, everybody goes there. Why, even the people next door went there."

"Say, I tell you, go to Alaska. Now that's a wonderful new country——"

"I know, but they say the tourists have discovered it. They say it's just overrun with all sorts of ordinary tourists."

"I'll bet you've never seen Niagara Falls."

"Nobody goes there any more. Anyway, they say the falls aren't what they used to be."

"There's Mexico City. Everybody's going to Mexico now."

"I wouldn't want to go there—especially after the Art Gadders have been."

"You might go to Europe."

"People aren't going to Europe this summer. Anyway we've been there."

"Well, I can't think of any more places."

"I know. There aren't any. You see the thing is I'd like to find some really unusual place . . . different, you know . . . that would really be educational . . . and give me something to bring back."

"I know. Broaden your perspective."

"That's it! I just don't want to have to come back and talk about the same old place—especially if it's somewhere everybody's been."

Bulging Waistline Is Warning, Beauty Expert Tells Women

Eileen Scott, Who Rejuvenates the Tired And Misfit of All Ages in Southern Maryland Camp, Gives Helpful Hints

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

TO DETECT the first sign of increasing years in a woman, look at her waistline. This rather than the chinline, as was formerly believed, is the surest barometer of feminine years, according to Eileen Scott, beauty expert who now is engaged in rejuvenating tired and aging women at her rest and health camp in southern Maryland.

EILEEN SCOTT

Sagging muscles around the midriff are the first enemy of youth, Miss Scott warns. She calls the waistline the "youth line" as far as women are concerned, because it is usually the first line they lose and the one that when lost most detracts from their youth and grace.

Miss Scott, who has had experience in England, Germany and other European countries in reviving and perpetuating feminine beauty, has operated a beauty salon in Washington for three years and has now established her camp on the banks of the Severn River near Annapolis. Patrons visit the camp for treatments of from three days to two weeks. They live in cabins and follow a simple daily routine which includes fresh air, relaxation, farm-grown vitamin foods and scientific exercises.

While all ages and types of women come to the camp for beautification, chief among the patrons is the middle-aged woman, who in the process of rearing her children or helping her husband in business, has neglected her own health and appearance. Here are some of the typical camp patrons:

Typical Patients

A woman under 40, who weighed 150 pounds but wanted to weigh 140 because she felt better at that weight and wore her clothes more successfully. She said that her husband's persistent exercises against paunches made her want to equal his trimness of figure. Under proper diet and exercise she achieved her goal.

A spinster, 40, neat as a pin, successful in her professional life but lacking social popularity. This listless patient was helped to greater physical vitality and beauty and gained social self-confidence and grace.

The business woman with run-down system from garbled lunches, forgotten breakfasts and lack of sleep, and with spirit broken from office worries and business competition. She was given an entire toning up and rehabilitation of outlook and saved from possible nervous collapse.

Romantic Girl, Too

A romantic girl who had all sorts of complexes about her mother, who was slimmer, lovelier and more socially attractive than she, and who was improved in appearance and adjusted in mind.

A woman of 60 who was seeking to lose her "old age" fat and who later, becoming divorced from her husband, married a younger man.

A slim, young girl of 112 pounds who took her fiance's jibes about her bulges seriously and subjected herself to a health program designed to give her a "husband-holding" figure.

Many of the women who come to the camp are in need of rest cures mentally as well as physically, Miss Scott finds, because of the strain of business or social life. Relaxation, contentment and a new slant on life, figure in their rejuvenation as much as diet and exercise.

Perfume Suggested For Insomnia

Instead of rushing to the medicine chest or tossing miserably on your bed when sleep fails to overtake you, try sprinkling your boudoir with perfume. Put a drop or two on your pillow, use it on negligees, sheer night gowns, or gay pajamas. Better still if you are tired and nervous, use it on your skin as a relaxing body-rub before retiring.

This method of inducing sleep is suggested by Helena Rubinstein, internationally known beauty authority. So completely does she believe in the above method that she has created a new perfume and called it "Slumber Song."

Fruits, Vegetables Of the Season Help Reducers Mightily

WHY DON'T YOU lose a pound a week during this hot weather? You can lose that much every week without half trying for all of the fruits and vegetables of the season are high in flavor and incredibly low in calories. So, help yourself to peaches, strawberries, cherries, melons, tomatoes, cucumbers and even corn-on-the-cob and lose weight on menus that are tempting.

Of course, there has to be a catch to all this . . . there are a few little things you will have to watch: mayonnaise, French dressing, butter, cream, sugar and sweetened beverages.

Retriet the Butter

But who wants corn-on-the-cob without butter? Or sandwiches without mayonnaise? You can have them, but not all you want. Restrict the butter each meal to one pat one-fourth inch thick. And use reducer's mayonnaise, boiled dressing or fruit dressing, all of which are low in calories.

Why not cultivate a liking for berries without cream? You will come to appreciate the fruit for its own flavor. If that doesn't satisfy you, however, allow yourself two tablespoons of 20 per cent cream, and count it as 60 calories for honest measure.

As you may recall, there is a definite relation between the salt intake and the amount of water retained in the tissues. You need some salt, but you are probably getting much more than you really need. Do not sprinkle it too liberally on vegetables and melons.

Drink Plenty of Water

Go out of your way, however, to drink plenty of water for it will keep you in better spirits—the more you perspire, the cooler you feel. This does not mean you can go ahead and drink large quantities of sweetened beverages. Due to their sugar content they are not nearly as cooling as cool water And don't overdo on mealtime beverages. Excess liquid with the meals stimulates the appetite and stretches the stomach.

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyons, Old Time Film Players, Return From Abroad

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Two old friends came sailing into port the other day—a man and woman who were movie pets of yesterday before the screen began to yell. They were that devoted couple Ben Lyons and Bebe Daniels, who have made a very good living ever since sound ruined their American film careers, by making personal appearances and doing plays all over the world.

There was another interesting arrival at about the same time. Mrs. Rifka Fishpen came in on the Queen Mary and on the pier to meet her was Mrs. Rose Frost, her sister, whom she had not sen for 50 years. They parted as children at their home in Poland, and from that day to this had not met. You can imagine the tearful emotion that practically flooded the dock at West Fiftieth street.

There was one large laugh in the course of the famous Buckner trial, when that gentleman was charged with conspiracy and using the mails to defraud—with many of Hollywood's leading figures as prospective victims. One pretty showgirl named Carol Maurice was called to the stand. In the course of her testimony she said that Buckner discussed marriage with her, but just in a "war in China" way. Carol meant, of course, that the handsome defendant had no more declared his serious intentions toward her than our Japanese friends have drawn up a formal contract to fight China. Carol's crack brightened an otherwise serious day — especially for brother Buckner.

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S Rainbow Room has brought back one of its most popular summer entertainments—high class exhibitions of table tennis between Ruth Aarons, the 19-year-old woman's champion, and Sandor Glancz. This may seem like peculiar fun for a night club crowd, but I assure you that it is beautiful, graceful and really exciting.

Eastern Shore Home Economist Gives Broiled Clams Recipe

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

Favorite recipes of leading home economists of Washington will be featured daily in the Homemaker.

CAROLINE CHESSER, our guest food editor today, is from the Eastern Shore of Maryland and knows that clams are a most delicious food.

Miss Chesser

Miss Chesser, director of home economics, Electric Institute of Washington, was graduated from the University of Maryland, School of Home Economics. She served on the home service bureau staff, Potomac Electric Power Co., following her graduation and, since 1934, has been in her present position at the Electric Institute. Miss Chesser has contributed an excellent way to prepare clams. She says:

"Broiling lends itself to hurry-up meals. It is suggested that the following dish be prepared in advance and stored in the electric refrigerator and all that remains to be done at meal time is the actual cooking process."

Deviled Clams

Chop 2 strips of bacon very fine and fry until crisp. Add 1 dozen well-drained clams, coarsely ground, which should measure about 1 cup, 1 tablespoon grated onion, ⅛ tablespoon chopped green pepper, 1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley, ½ teaspoon mustard, ½ tablespoon chopped pimiento, few grains cayanne pepper, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Simmer on "low" heat of the electric range for 10 minutes. Make white sauce, using part of clam juice. Add 2 egg yolks to hot sauce and when set remove from heat. Cool until sauce is thickened. Combine white sauce and clam mixture. Fill shells and sprinkle buttered bread crumbs over top. Place on broiler pan and brown in electric oven under broiler unit. Tomato slices or other vegetables may be broiled with the clams.

World Crisis Holds Diplomats in Capital

Some of Those Left Behind Find Opportunity for Parties; French Embassy Takes Time Out for Picnic on Bay

By Dudley Harmon

"Hitler's no gentleman—he ruins week-ends," plaintively remarked a member of the British Embassy staff the other day. Though he was joking, it's true that while most of the natives of the Capital hastily cleared out of town over the Fourth, lots of diplomats remained at their desks to try and hold down Danzig and Tientsin. So Washington wasn't entirely deserted over Independence Day, and some of those left behind even found time to give a party or two.

The prize for the hardest working embassy of all over the long week-end should go to the French. From the Ambassador down, everybody but the Attache, Count de Gramont, who is vacationing on Cape Cod, stayed in town to toil. They worked Saturday and yesterday at the office, but took time off on Sunday for an all-embassy picnic and swimming party on Chesapeake Bay.

This outing was so successful that yesterday the Second Secretary of the embassy, Baron Baeyens, invited a few other friends for a Fourth of July celebration on board the good ship Lorraine, Capt. Jimmy Strigle in charge. Later the Third Secretary and Mme. Lucet gave a small, informal supper party for their house guests, M. and Mme. Robert Valeur, of New York, who arrived last Friday to spend the holiday with them. Another diplomatic party on the books for the night of the Fourth was the farewell supper given by the Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti in honor of the Marquis Capomazza and Nobildonna Betty Capomazza, who will sail Saturday for Rome, where the former has been ordered to duty at the foreign office.

French Envoy Has Luncheon Guests

The French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, had a small family luncheon at the embassy yesterday for M. and Mme. Valeur. M. Valeur is a professor of economics at Columbia University and also heads a French information center in New York. Young and brilliant, he is a friend of Profs. Rexford Tugwell, Raymond Moley, Roswell Magill and other early New Dealers, and used to come to Washington frequently when all the braintrusters were working like mad, sleeping on couches in their offices and disappointing dinner hostesses at the last minute, in an effort to save the world. M. Valeur says that Washington seems quite tame now in comparison to those hectic times.

Mme. Valeur, an American, is blonde, pretty, and one of the most charming of recent visitors to Washington. She and her husband will sail the middle of August for a stay with his family in Macon, in the heart of the French wine country. Besides the party given by the Lucets last night in their honor, they were feted over the week-end at dinners at which Jacques Truelle, embassy Counselor and Jacques Dumaine, First Secretary, entertained.

Count Saint-Quentin, incidentally, has recovered after being ill for over a week with an infected foot. He is planning to go to New York to celebrate Bastille Day, July 14, at a colossal festivity at the World's Fair. There will be a ball on Thursday evening, July 13, at the beautiful French pavilion, with its terraces overlooking the lagoon and fountain displays. The following evening the envoy will attend a dance for French war veterans at the Hotel Pennsylvania. The Naval Attache, Commander Pierre Benech, and several other members of the embassy staff will accompany him. Meanwhile, Mr. Truelle will hold things down in Washington, and there will be the usual sort of observance of the French Fourth of July here at the embassy.

To return to yesterday's boating party, which couldn't have been more fun. The group left Washington early in the morning for Annapolis, and first made a tour of the Naval Academy. Commander Benech, who was in charge of three French submarine chasers during the World War, put all the Americans present to shame by identifying the various ships lined up at the dock, when they themselves couldn't tell a battleship from a destroyer. All the signal flags were flying gaily in honor of the holiday.

There's no better method of getting cool on a hot day than hiring a boat and going out into the water of the Chesapeake for a swim. After lunch and a dip the party tried a bit of fishing, but ended up by losing all the bait off their lines without so much as catching even an unattractive toadfish. Trout abound in these waters, and across the bay, on the Eastern Shore side, the catches provide a flourishing business, with the famous Maryland sofe-shell crab predominating.

Sailing Proves Very Exciting

Though the waters of the Chesapeake are not the most invigorating in the world, sailing there can be very exciting. Squalls spring up often, and yesterday it looked for a while as though there would be a very nasty one, but it blew over except for a slight shower. Nevertheless, after one look at the lowering sky the navigators cautiously took down their sails and were towed in by motor boats. Capt. Strigle told us that every day at dusk the Naval Academy sends out four boats to look out for any disabled craft.

A perfect French picnic was enjoyed on board yesterday, a relief from the inevitable American sandwiches. We had crisp green lettuce, with French dressing, cold fried chicken, sliced ham, peaches and cherries done up in a basket covered with oak leaves, and all washed down with elegant white wine.

Among those present, who concluded that they weren't sorry to have stayed in Washington over the holiday after all, were Miss Marcia Umbsen, who wore a white sports dress with a bright-colored wool belt; Jacques de Thiers, of the Belgian Embassy; M. Lucet and M. and Mme. Valeur, and Comdr. Benech. Later most of the guests, with Baron Baeyens and other members of the French Embassy staff, ended up at the Lucets for dinner.

"Vacationing" at Home

Harris & Ewing.

While scores of residents in Washington and surrounding territory are either away on vacations or planning to go soon, Mrs. Addison Foster, wife of the assistant to the director of the National Emergency Council, is firmly resolved to spend the summer at home. One of her favorite outdoor sports is gardening, and she has plenty of chances to enjoy that at the place to which she and her husband recently moved in Sandy Spring, Md. Above, she and her terrier, "Tugger," seemed pleased with the prospect of spending many happy summer hours in their garden

President's Mother to Sail

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, will be on board the Ile de France when she sails tomorrow for Europe at 11:30 a. m.

Other notables who will leave on the same ship include Dr. Alexis Carrell, famous French scientist; Jean Giraudoux, French writer; Andre Dubonnet, French inventor, and Mme. Dubonnet, and Germain Seligman, owner of the New York Art Gallery.

The Ile de France will arrive in New York this morning from Southampton with a number of prominent passengers on board. In the company will be a group of French deputies, members of the Merchant Marine Commission, coming to the United States for a short visit and for the New York World's Fair.

The delegation is headed by Paul Bacquet. Members include Lucien Gasparin, Francois Blancho, former undersecretary of the navy; Raymond Berenger and Jean-Louis Rolland.

Thoms Will Sail For Norway Today

Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom will sail today aboard the Oslofjord, flagship of the Norwegian-America Line, on a North Cape cruise. The Oslofjord will voyage to Iceland, North Cape, the Norwegian fjords, Oslo, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Edinburgh and Holland, returning to New York August 18.

Donald Downs Holds Annual July 4 Picnic

Hamburger and hot dogs—royal fare by now—were features of the picnic menu yesterday when Donald Downs entertained at his annual Fourth of July fete at Downscrest, his estate in Virginia.

At around 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon a few of the host's friends gathered for the holiday outing that has been given each July for the past five years.

Although not as large as the picnic parties Mr. Downs has given in the past, yesterday's event was equally delightful. Guests who enjoyed shooting firecrackers early in the afternoon also cooked their own lunch over open fires.

Argentine Envoy And Wife Feted

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil were ranking guests at the cocktail party given Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Bernon S. Prentice, of New York, at the Homestead, Hot Springs, Va.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. John White Geary, of Philadelphia; the former Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. James Watson Gerard, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Ingalls Sard, the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar J. Procope; Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, Col. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, Mrs. Bispham McKean, of Ithan, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, of McLean, Va.

The Dorrells To Live Here

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ellsworth Dorrell, who were married June 24, will make their home at 1935 Sixteenth street after a wedding trip. The bride, the former Miss Marian Louise Padgett, is the daughter of Charles Marion Padgett, of Washington, and the late Mrs. Florence Padgett. Mr. Dorrel is the son of Mrs. James C. Wood, also of this city.

Esther Memorial Church of the Holy Communion was the scene of the wedding, at which the Rev. Roy E. LeMoine officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white mousseline de soie with a lace bodice and sleeves and a fingertip veil held with pearls. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. William Rothrock was matron of honor for her sister, wearing blue dotted swiss and a white rough straw hat with blue streamers and carrying mixed summer flowers. The bridesmaids, the Misses Miriam Larman, Ethel Hayes, Elizabeth Englert and Florence Cooke, wore frocks of pink, orchid, green and yellow. Their hats were trimmed with streamers to match the gowns, and they carried bouquets like that of the matron of honor.

Agnes Stock, Dr. Scanlon On Honeymoon

Couple Plan to Make Home at Norwalk, Conn., on Return

Dr. and Mrs. John Joseph Scanlon now are motoring through New England. They were married June 29 at St. Anthony's Church in Brookland, D. C. The bride, the former Agnes Brooks Stock, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Francis Stock, of this city. Dr. Scanlon is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Francis Scanlon, of Norwalk, Conn.

The ceremony took place at 10 in the morning, with the Rev. Mark E. Stock, uncle of the bride, officiating. The bride wore a white lace and net frock made over taffeta. Her finger-tip length tulle veil was held in place by a cluster of orange blossoms. she carried an old-fashioned bouliles of the valley.

Miss Angela Stock, cousin of the bride, wearing a fuchia organdy gown over taffeta, was maid of honor. Her horsehair picture hat was trimmed with matching streamers of velvet and she carrid an old-fashioned bouquet.

Miss Mary Frances Cahill, niece of the bride, attended as junior bridesmaid. Her gown of blue organdy was made over taffeta and her large horsehair hat had matching streamers. She also carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

James Wilton Hardee, of Washington, was best man. Ushers were Dr. Luther Gray, John Martin, of Norfolk; J. Brooks Stock and William McSherry Stock, the latter two brothers of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

After their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Scanlon will make their home at 230 West avenue, Norwalk, Conn.

Ervin Couple Will Live Here

NOW ON THEIR wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Ervin, jr., whose marriage took place Wednesday evening, June 28, in Falls Church, Va., will make their home in Washington. The former Miss Verna Louise Bergeson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bergeson, of Arlington, and Mr. Ervin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Ervin, of Falls Church, were married at the Columbia Baptist Church. The Rev. U. S. Knox, pastor of the church, officiated at the 7:30 ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white silk net over slipper satin, fashioned on fitted lines with a long train, and a bertha of Chantilly lace, similar to the lace edging the train. Her long veil was held to her hair with a halo of Chantilly lace and orange blossoms and she carried a white satin prayer book with showers of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

THE BRIDE'S three sisters were her attendants. Mrs. William C. Wynkoop was the matron of honor, Miss Dorothy Bergeson the maid of honor, and Miss Christine Marjorie Bergeson the bridesmaid. Annette Louise Wynkoop, niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

The best man was Dr. Clarence Hartman, of Falls Church, and the ushers were Richard Ervin, of Falls Church, brother of the bridegroom, and William C. Wynkoop, of Arlington. There was a small reception immediately after the ceremony in the church parlors and another reception later at the home of the bride's parents.

THE BRIDE was graduated from Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va., and Mr. Ervin is a graduate of George Washington University and has been doing graduate work at the University of Maryland. He is a chemist at the Bureau of Mines, Department of Interior, and his fraternities include Alpha Chi Sigma, Phi Sigma and the American Chemical Society.

Mrs. Calhoun Visits In Belle Haven, Va.

Mrs. C. C. Calhoun has been spending the past few days at the Belle Haven, Va., home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Waring, who were guests over the holidays of Mrs. Sutherland Mayo at Rehoboth Beach.

Mrs. Calhoun expects to return soon to 3321 Sixteenth street for a visit at the conclusion of her stay at the Waring home.

Miss Riggs, J. J. Meyer, Jr., To Wed Aug. 19

Ceremony Scheduled For St. John's Church In Olney, Md.

Miss Katharine Lansdale Riggs has completed plans for her wedding to John Justus Meyer, jr., of Baltimore, on August 19. Miss Riggs is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Howard Riggs, of Brookville, Montgomery County.

The ceremony will take place at 7 o'clock in the evening at St. John's Episcopal Church at Olney.

Miss Sally Lansdale is coming from Texas to be maid of honor for Miss Riggs. Mrs. Richard Pue, of Highland, Md., will be matron of honor.

The remaining attendants include Miss Margaret Thrasher, of Jefferson, Md.; Miss Elizabeth Anthony, of Centerville, who will be married Saturday to Charles Cecil; Miss Chandle Robison, of Sandy Spring, Md.; Mrs. Douglas Riggs, jr., sister-in-law of the bride-elect.

The ushers are Eugene Rush, of Towson, Md.; Joshua Wheeler, of Lutherville; Melvin Cole, of Parkville; William Woolston, of Catonsville; Charles Cecil, of Cambridge, and Franklin Riggs, brother of the bride-elect.

Many parties are in the offing for the young couple, but as yet few dates have been set. There will be a supper preceding the rehearsal to be given August 18 at the Francis Lattie Inn, in Sandy Spring.

F. P. Robertses On Bridal Tour

Following a motor trip to the West Coast, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Palmer Roberts, who were married in Morristown, N. J., June 30, will make their home in Philadelphia.

The bride, the former Miss Weltha Horsman, is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Oliver C. Horsman, of the First Baptist Church, Morristown. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Roberts, of this city.

The bride's father officiated at the ceremony in the parsonage of his Morristown church in the presence of the families and a small group of friends.

Wearing a blue net dress with a full skirt, the bride carried a bouquet of roses, gardenias and baby's breath. Mrs. Wesley R. Thompson, of Metuchen, N. J., was her sister's only attendant.

Maurice W. Fillius, of this city, was best man.

Mrs. Roberts is a graduate of Hood College, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. Mr. Roberts attended Cornell University and is a member of Beta Theta Pi.

P. W. Phillipses Spend Summer in Hawaii

Among the members of the Bethesda Woman's Club who are away on interesting vacation trips this summer is Mrs. P. W. Phillips who with Mr. Phillips is spending two months in Hawaii. Mrs. Phillips is chairman of art for the club.

Mrs. E. M. Willis, also a Bethesda Club member, is motoring in Canada for a month or six weeks with Mr. Willis.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring will return to Washington today from a farm in Pennsylvania, where they and their three children spent the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet will leave today for New York, where they will be at the Plaza Hotel briefly before going on to Ridgefield, Conn., to visit friends. Later they will go to the Finger Lake region of New York to spend some time.

Mrs. Paul H. Bartlett left yesterday for New York, and will sail from there tomorrow on the President Harding to return to her home in France. She has spent several months in Washington in the house that adjoins the studio where her late husband, the noted sculptor, formerly worked.

Winant Johnston, of 3417 N street, spent the holiday in New York, where he was registered at the Hotel Commodore.

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Herrick, who left three weeks ago for an extended tour through the West and Middle West, are now in Denver, Colo., for a few days. Later they will go to New Mexico for a brief stay before returning to Washington.

Mrs. Edwin H. Herring, of 3026 Porter street, and her sister, Mrs. John Swats, of Hinton, W. Va., are spending a week at Craig-Healing Springs, Va. Also at that resort is Harry A. Fellows, jr., of 6404 N. Washington Blvd., Arlington, who will be there for two weeks.

During her visit to the New York World's Fair, Miss Mary K. Morris, of 1509 Sixteenth street, is stopping at the Beekman Tower Hotel. Other Washingtonians who recently registered there include Mrs. Iva O. Swift and Miss Dena M. Kingsley.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Charlotte Noland To Sail Own Boat On Coastal Cruise

SAILING FROM Baltimore tomorrow on her boat, Sea Fox, will be Miss Charlotte Noland, who will be away from her Hunt Country home for several weeks.

She will stop first at Norfolk, Va., then sail on to Ocean City, Md., and from there to Southampton, L. I., where she will stay long enough for a visit to the World's Fair, a few miles away. Her itinerary will next take her to Gloucester and Marblehead, Mass.

Among her guests will be Hugh Kerr, of Middleburg, who recently was graduated from Virginia Military Institute, receiving his commission as lieutenant in the field artillery of the Officer's Reserve Corps.

SATURDAY, JULY 15, is the date Miss Margie Garrison Morton has selected for her marriage to Joseph Frank Baer, son of Montgomery, Ala., and the late Mrs. Baer.

The ceremony will take place Theodore Lawrence Baer, of at 4:30 p. m. and will be followed by a reception at Suffield Farm, Warrenton, Va., the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard DeForest Morton. Only members of the immediate families and a few intimate friends will witness the wedding. Miss Morton's only sister, Mrs. Albert E. Peirce, jr., of Key West, Fla., will be her matron of honor and only attendant. Mr. Baer will have as best man his twin brother, Carl Baer, of Montgomery; and the Rev. Paul Borden, rector of St. James Episcopal Church, Warrenton, will officiate.

MISS MORTON attended Warrenton Country School and was graduated from Cathedral School, Washington. She was one of the loveliest debutantes of the season two years ago, when she was presented in Richmond, and also attended many parties in Washington, Baltimore and Virginia. Mr. Bear was graduated from Washington and Lee University, and is now in the contracting business in Montgomery, where he and his bride will make their home.

INVITATIONS have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, of Mansfield, Middleburg, for the dance in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Elizabeth Mayo Atkinson, on Friday, September 1. Miss Atkinson was graduated from Oldfields School, Maryland, in June, receiving her diploma with honors and with an additional prize as being the outstanding girl in the school.

Only three times in the 75 years of the school's existence has a student been awarded this high honor.

THE DEBUT PARTY will take place at Welbourne, the old home of Miss Atkinson's great-great-grandfather, John Dulany. It was also the residence of her great-grandfather, the late Col. Richard Dulany. It is now owned by her aunt, Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morison.

All indications are that the party will be one of the largest and most brilliant events of the September season. Miss Atkinson will also be presented at the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore in December and at the Richmond German in Richmond, where her father formerly lived. She is a niece of Dr. and Mrs. John Burke, of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Carter, of Richmond, and Mr. and Mrs. Algernon Craven, of Charlottesville. Mrs. Atkinson formerly was Miss Neville Lemmon, of Welbourne, near Upperville.

D. A. R. Set to Restore Ballroom at Gadsby's

Work to Start Next Week, Directed By Mrs. Sinclair; Original, in Museum In New York, Will Be Duplicated

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Virginia Daughters of the American Revolution, headed by Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, State regent, will inaugurate a project of country-wide interest next week, with the beginning of work on restoration of the ballroom of Gadsby's Tavern. The interior of this room in the historic hostelry in Alexandria, which was frequented by George Washington, will duplicate the original now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York City.

The Virginia Daughters have been working with the assistance of Thomas Waterman, architect with the Department of the Interior, in arranging the restoration.

The tavern, now the property of the American Legion, is visited by tourists throughout the season but only the first floor in the original part of the building and the old kitchen in the basement have been open. Until now, the ballroom and three bedrooms across the hall on the second floor have been empty and dilapidated.

Three Bedrooms Already Completed

The bedrooms already have been restored and refurnished through the efforts of the D. A. R. and C. A. R. of the State. The room where the mysterious "Female Stranger" died following her arrival on an English ship has just been restored and furnished by the John Alexander Chapter of the D. A. R. in Alexandria, a chapter composed of young women, many of whom were former members of the Children of the American Revolution. This room is at the front.

Next to it, another small bedroom has been restored by the eight societies of the C. A. R. in and adjacent to Alexandria, in honor of Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, immediate past president of the national society, and the third room, at the head of the stairway, has been restored and furnished by the Virginia Children of the American Revolution, in tribute to Mrs. Sinclair, who is a past national president and now honorary national president of the organization.

An old inventory, listing all of the furnishings of the rooms in the tavern, has been invaluable in refurnishing it with authentic pieces. Each bedroom has a four-poster "field bed," corner washstand with bowl and pitcher, a chair, rug and draperies. The furniture, with the exception of the rugs and draperies, is all of the period, but the hangings and floor coverings necessarily are reproductions. The only variation in the furnishings of the three rooms is in the color of the draperies and washstand sets. The bowl and pitcher in the room of the "Female Stranger" are rose color; those in the middle room blue and in that at the head of the stairs, white and luster.

Individual Gift To Restore Corridor

The corridor and stairway will be restored also, as a gift from Mrs. Collins Jones Peake, of California, in memory of her father, the late Robert Jones, who was greatly interested in the preservation of Gadsby's.

The ballroom had as furniture only a harpsichord, a table and chairs along the walls. The musicians' gallery was reached by ladder from the corridor and, once the members of the orchestra had climbed up, they were there for the evening and the ladder was removed so as not to block the narrow hallway.

Work is expected to progress rapidly in the ballroom's restoration, according to Mrs. Sinclair, although it must be done with minutest care as to detail. Much of the money for the project already has been contributed, but the entire amount has not been raised and gifts still are coming in from both chapters and individuals interested in having a part in the restoration of the historic old building.

D. A. R. Officials Go to Institute

Mrs. Sinclair will be here most of the summer to watch the progress of the undertaking. Tomorrow, however, she will go to Charlottesville to be present at the Friday session of the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, at which Mrs. Henry M. Roberts, jr., president general of the D. A. R., will preside. She will motor down, and others in the party will be Mrs. Pouch, Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, new national president of the C. A. R.; Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general of the D. A. R.; Miss Page Schwarwaelder, treasurer general, and Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, national corresponding secretary of the C. A. R., all of Washington.

Several social affairs will be given in connection with the D. A. R. day at the institute. Mrs. E. J. Perkins will entertain tomorrow night at her Colonial home near the Farmington Club, in honor of Mrs. Robert and Mrs. Sinclair; a breakfast will be given for them Friday morning by Mrs. Charles B. Keesee, honorary Virginia State regent and national chairman of the correct use of the flag, and a luncheon is planned Friday afternoon at the Farmington Club by the Virginia State D. A. R. in honor of Mrs. Robert. The party from here will motor back Friday evening.

Catholic Group to Meet

Court District of Columbia, Catholic Daughters of America, will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at the Willard Hotel. As this is the only meeting in July, a large attendance is expected.

The grand regent, Miss Josephine Walsh; territorial deputy, Miss Augusta Uhl, and her mother, Mrs. Anna J. Uhl, with Miss Florence Winter, the national and local chairman of the Convert League, and Miss Anne Doyle, will leave the latter part of this week for Detroit to attend the national convention.

A portable book-rack, containing 50 books and various magazines and pamphlets, was presented by the Catholic Daughters to St. Mary's ward in Providence Hospital Sunday. A similar one will be presented to Georgetown Hospital in the near future. These racks were purchased with funds obtained as a result of the philanthropic party held recently under the chairmanship of Miss Uhl.

A Junior Council meeting was held at the apartment of Miss Gertrude O'Connor, 3240 Hiatt place northwest, last Wednesday and plans were formulated for an active fall program.

Miss Josephine Walsh, grand regent, announced the appointment of Miss Margaret Ruppert as chairman of the ways and means committee for July and August. Great interest is being taken in the plans for the moonlight cruise Friday night, August 4, on the City of Washington, Wilson Line.

Montgomery Health Council Plans to Buy Station Wagon

Volunteer Workers Assist County Officials In All Phases of Work, Including the Maintenance of Children's Dental Clinics

The Public Health Lay Council of Montgomery County, started four years ago as an auxiliary to the Montgomery County Health Department, is planning to buy a new station wagon to carry patients to and from clinics.

Mrs. Morrison Clark, of Silver Spring, is president of the council, which is formed of Representatives from committees with a membership of 60 women, who serve as volunteer workers, assisting the health department in the county. There are committees in the county. There are committees in Rockville, Bethesda, Cabin John, Laytonsville, Sandy Spring, Silver Spring and Takoma Park.

The need for dental work among children in the county schools was one of the primary reasons for the formation of the organization. Members assist in the dental examination of children to the third grade. It now maintains two dental clinics, one in Rockville and the other in Silver Spring. Each autumn a dance is given by the council to raise part of the necessary funds. Other organizations contribute to the support of the clinics through the council.

Health officers are assisted also by the members at prenatal and preschool clinics.

This spring, at the annual luncheon of the council, a poll was suggested on the appointment of a sanitary inspector, whose chief duty would be the inspection of food in Montgomery County. In Bethesda, the lay committee, of which Mrs. Philip Bradley is chairman, won the appointment of a part-time food inspector for Bethesda.

Mrs. Morrison Clark, of Silver Spring, is president of the council; Mrs. C. C. Tumbleson, chairman of the woman's board of the county hospital, vice president; Mrs. Raleigh Chinn, of Rockville, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle, of Bethesda, recording secretary, and Mrs. Dexter Bullard, of Rockville, treasurer.

New officers will be elected in October, with nominees to be presented by a committee including Mrs. Austin LaMar, of Sandy Spring, Mrs. Bradley and Mrs. Thomas Wrathall, of Silver Spring.

An advisory committee, to which the committees of the council report, and which aids in outlining activities and prevents duplication, is comprised of representatives of the various departments. The members are: Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer; the public health nurses; Miss Julia Foley, in-school nurse; Dr. Edwin Broome, superintendent of schools; Mrs. Madeline O. Fennell, probation officer; Miss Ruth Bolton, Miss Frances Leizear, superintendent of nurses at the county hospital, and Dr. William Linthicum.

Helen Twelvetrees to Be Tea Guest Of Helene Kravatz This Afternoon

HELEN TWELVETREES, who is playing at the Olney Theater this week, will be the guest of Helene Kravatz at a tea being given this afternoon by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington at the Raleigh Hotel from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, which members and guests will attend.

MRS. MERTON E. TWOGOOD, of the Animal Rescue League, has made a plea that persons going away for a few days or for longer vacations, make provision for the care of their pets or notify the league to call for them. The notion that animals can get along by themselves if turned loose in the summer is a mistake, she says—even for a day or two. Cats and dogs which have been kept as pets cannot fend for themselves. They stray off and become hungry.

MISS MARGARET COOK is in Pasadena, Calif., attending the national convention of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority as delegate from the Washington alumnae chapter, and Miss Margaret Taylor, daughter of Commander and Mrs. A. E. Taylor, of 2910 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, who has been a student at the University of Wisconsin the past year, will represent the active chapter there, of which she is president.

Miss Cook, who went to California by way of the Panama Canal, is a graduate of the University of Maryland and was a member of Pi Delta Chapter there. Since her graduation she has taught in the Home Economics Department of the Maryland Park High School at Seat Pleasant, Md., and is a member of the Nu Omicron, home economics sorority, the D. C. Home Economics Association and the American Home Economics Association. She also has held several offices in the Association of University Women and is former president and now treasurer of the Washington alumnae chapter of A. O. Pi.

In addition to her professional interests, Miss Cook is an accomplished pianist and attended Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore and taught piano for several years.

Miss Taylor is a member of Sigma Epsilon Sigma, freshman honorary fraternity at the University of Wisconsin. She is also a member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet of the assistant staff of the Women's Self-Government Association, and a social worker at the Wisconsin General Hospital. She will also be an assistant for freshman orientation week this fall.

Other members from Washington to attend the convention will be Mrs. William B. Henderson, Zeta, who is alumnae adviser to Pi Delta Chapter, and Miss Mary Louise Bucher, Omega.

The Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority was founded at Barnard College in 1897. It is international, having several chapters in Canada. The national philanthropic work maintains the Social Service Department of the Frontier Nursing Service, whose work in the Kentucky mountains is well known to Washingtonians.

Among the well-known members of the sorority are Margaret Bourke White (Mrs. Erskine Caldwell), photographer; Mary Ellen Chase, author; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard, of Texas, and Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, of the Veterans' Administration.

ACTIVITY at the Y. W. C. A. has moved up to the roof during the vacation period. There is to be a series of music programs on Wednesday nights, at which records of symphony numbers will be played. These will be given each week through July 26 from 7:30 to 8:15.

The regular Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. dances will be on Friday nights from 9 to 12, through July and August, under the auspices of the recreation committee. Members of the committee are Ann Schuel, chairman; Bernard Bracht, vice chairman; Marie Zandonini, treasurer; Rosina Carlo, secretary; Edythe Thompson, Jane Nichols, Davis Agey, William Brower, Julius Ritter and Russell Gee. Mrs. Virginia Sholar represents the "Y. W." on the committee and Sam Kekker, assistant resident secretary, the "Y. M."

A group of business girls spent the holiday week-end at Kamp Kahlert of the Y. W. C. A. The group included Teresa Barrett, Winnie Baldwin, Marie Beranek, Isabel Coogan, Sally Martin, Pauline Menkal, Losi Nagel, Marie Puhr and Mollie Schlafman.

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY, C. A. R., at its last board meeting reported 125 new members added during the month. Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, the new president, is making preparations for the second C. A. R. day at the New York World's Fair, to be held some time in August, the date not yet announced.

MRS. MILDRED Y. ROBESON has been appointed as delegate from Beta Psi Chapter of Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority to the national convention which will be held in Salt Lake City, July 13, 14 and 15.

Mrs. Mildred Bishop, president of the chapter, has invited the members to a supper party at her new home in Silver Spring, August 29, when founders' day is celebrated by the sorority. The chapter meetings will be resumed on September 11.

GAMMA CHAPTER of Iota Theta Sorority will meet tomorrow at the home of Miss Ena Braidie, 4715 Fourteenth street.

Dinner to Honor Martha Whitney

Mrs. Robert Bacon, widow of the one-time United States Ambassador to France, will give a dinner-dance Friday evening at Old Acres, her estate in Westbury, Long Island, for her granddaughter, Miss Martha Phyllis Whitney, who is to be married the follwing day to William S. Rome 2d, of Cincinnati.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Whitney, of New York. The Episcopal Church of the Advent on Jericho Turnpike at Westbury will be the scene of the wedding. Later, the reception will take place at Home Acres, the Whitney estate near the church.

Jeers Greet Dr. Smith, Wife At Baton Rouge

Federal Men Question Former L. S. U. Head; $50,000 Bond Set

By the United Press.

Baton Rouge, La., July 4.—Federal investigators rushed Dr. and Mrs. James Monroe Smith into a jail cell tonight and began questioning them, even before parish officers had fingerprinted and booked them—Smith on a charge of embezzling $100,000 from Louisiana State University and Mrs. Smith for aiding his escape to Canada.

The Federal officers presumably questioned Smith about his income taxes and concerning his multifarious plunges on the wheat futures market for a purported syndicate, but what they discussed could not be learned.

Reporters, photographers and a milling crowd were forced from the courthouse. The jail is on the top floor.

The heavily guarded automobile that brought the couple from Shushan Airport in New Orleans was met by a jeering crowd that covered the courthouse lawn. Officers swinging nightsticks forced the booing spectators back.

$50,000 Bond

Federal officers interrupted the questioning after 45 minutes while the couple were fingerprinted and booked. Federal investigators would tell neither State officials nor reporters what they had learned from Smith.

The Federal officers who questioned Smith included U. S. District Attorney Herbert Christenberry, Assistant U. S. Attorney General Arnold Raum; V. A. Coomer, Dallas, Tex.; S. A. Marrigan and A. D. Burford, New Orleans, both Treasury investigators.

Louis Albritton, Smith's attorney, doubted that the educator would attempt to make bond—$50,000—tonight.

Smith asked Sheriff DeBretton:

"Is the grand jury in session tomorrow?" The answer was "yes."

DeBretton said he would lock Smith in the biggest cell in the parish prison for the night.

"Glad to Be Back"

The Smiths' journey home in disgrace began last night in Brockville, Ontario, where they had surrendered after a continent-wide search of a week.

Maj. Murphy Roden, assistant superintendent of State police, and Bryan Clemmons, Sanchez' special investigator, drove them to Syracuse, N. Y. From Syracuse they were flown in the Louisiana plane to Newark, where they boarded an airliner for New Orleans. It stopped briefly in Washington, Charlotte, N. C., and Atlanta.

As Dr. and Mrs. Smith stepped from the plane at Shushan Airport in New Orleans a radio announcer broke through the ring of officers and shoved a microphone in front of his face.

"I'm back, poorly advised—but glad to be back," he said.

Smith is the integral witness in the far-flung Louisiana State University scandal—an affair that was spreading by the hour as investigators dug further into it.

Investigation had shown that Smith had handled in the last three years $2,027,000 in university bonds and cash. He had borrowed $500,000 in the school's name from three banks. His final week's market losses were estimated at more than $430,000.

The members of the purported syndicate for which he had dealt still were unknown, although J. M. Brown, his 43-year-old intermediary broker, had been indicted on charges of assisting him to embezzle a $100,000 check.

Three of the four persons indicted with Smith were out on bond. Brown had been released in $15,000 bail; Mrs. Smith's nephew, J. Emory Adams, and Owen Waller Ware, the Smiths' son-in-law, were free in $7,500 bail each. Mrs. Smith's bond had been set at $7,500. The latter three were charged with aiding the educator to flee after he resigned as president of L. S. U. June 25.

In a Fourth of July address at Opelousas, La., Gov. Earl K. Long asked the people of Louisiana not to be "stampeded" by the situation at Louisiana State University and asked a "chance" for his administration to prove what it means to do.

insure the impotence of the larger Democratic powers.' "

The Army strategist's speech, as delivered before the institute, eliminated a reference in the advance copy to armament legislation in the present session of Congress as aimed at saving the United States from "a situation comparable to that in which Great Britain and France found themselves last September."

Weak in Equipment

Prime requirements of the Army today are an addition of 20,000 men to the garrisons of overseas posts, raising total overseas strength to 60,000, Gen Strong said, and the creation of "a small, highly mobile, well-seasoned, hard-hitting force capable of instant use wherever circumtances may demand."

The nucleus of such a force is to be found in the 60,000 troops now available to be sent anywhere, but these divisions are "woefully weak" in equipment and are 35,000 men under full strength, he stated.

"If there should be three or four Panay incidents in concussion and succession, this country would want to go to town," he said, at the afternoon round table.

When asked "if these Latin American countries the Navy is going to help defend are really democracies," the naval officer referred his questioner to the State Department.

Johnson Blasts President

"Nothing on earth" will stop President Roosevelt from running for a third term, "if he thinks he can get away with it," Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said. His was the only speech not devoted to the defense motif.

"But if he thinks there's a 50-50 chance of getting beaten, nothing on eath would induce him to break that sacred tradition," the general added.

If Mr. Roosevelt leaves the White House in 1941, "or . . . for that matter . . . if he would throw out some of the palace guard," the effect on the country's economy "would be electric," Johnson asserted. "The only question then would be not whether we were going to have recovery, but whether it might come too fast and develop into a runaway boom."

Questioned on the possibilities of war in Europe, the general said, "When you're playing poker with a couple of megalomaniacs you can't tell how the game is going to come out—either by standard bluffing practice or ordinary rules as to which hand is higher."

Dr. Brooks Emeny, director of the foreign affairs council in co-operation with Cleveland College, and V. F. Coe, teacher of political economy in the University of Toronto, discussed raw materials as they affect the balance of power, particularly in the United States and Canada.

Dr. Emeny asserted that only the United States and Russia were capable of supplying themselves with the larger proportion of their essential raw material needs and that these two, together with the British Empire as a whole, were the only groups that could attain a high degree of self-sufficiency in time of war or emergency.

Coe told the institute Canada's place in world economy was determined almost entirely by the United Kingdom and the United States. He said, "She is one of the most important economic parts of the British Empire, and yet has an economy which is extremely dependent upon that of the United States."

D. C. 'Fellers' Forget About Fireworks at Park Picnics, Games

Well, a feller really doesn't have to shoot off fireworks to have a lot of fun on the Fourth. That's the conclusion of Peewee and Red and Charlie and all the rest of the kids who had a swell day at Langdon Park yesterday.

Their celebration of the Fourth was duplicated by hundreds of other children and their parents at all-day picnics at Fort Bayard Park, North Takoma Playground, Taft Recreation Center and Whittier School Playground.

Typical of yesterday's recreations in the District, the Langdon and Taft Parks' activities were sponsored by the Bladensburg Road Citizens Association, Brookland-Woodridge Business Association, Defense Post, V. F. W.; Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, Taft Athletic Club and Woodridge Athletic Club.

Peewee There Early

Peewee, who packs a mighty enthusiasm for life in a small frame and who has no time to bother with the press on as important a day as the Fourth, raced down to the park yesterday morning before his parents had finished breakfast. He, Red and Charlie passed a baseball around until more folks arrived for the flag raising at 10 a. m.

Athletic events began under the direction of Charles F. Green of the Woodridge Athletic Club. Peewee and most of the other fellows, between 8 and 10 years old, entered the 50-yard dash and the standing broad jump. There were running and jumping events for both men and women of all ages.

'Gee,' Quotes Peewee

"Gee!" was all Peewee could say when he saw his mother in the rolling pin throw. He chewed on the sweet snowball the committee had given him for entering the athletic events, and jumped up and down with ecstasy to see Mother and Dad in the married couples relay race.

After stuffing himself with a big lunch, he went whooping into the wading pool with the rest of the fellows, and came out only to see the double-header ball game between the Woodridge Athletic Club and Fogelman's Athletic Club.

It made you feel pretty good, lying there in the grass with your bare legs wet, your tummy full, watching the double-header while the phonograph loudspeaker at the edge of the park played swingy tunes like the "Beer Barrel Polka."

In the afternoon there were other novel athletic events. Not until Peewee rode down to the Monument with his parents in the evening to see the fireworks did it occur to him that he hadn't thought of firecrackers all day. But by that time he was too sleepy to be interested.

3 Hurt, 1 Badly, As Yachts Collide

Gibson Island, Md., July 4 (AP).—Three men were injured, one seriously, in a collision between the sailing yacht Venture and the motor yacht Arla today. Howard Grigg, of Baltimore, standing on the bow of the Arla, was knocked unconscious into the water by a falling spar from the anchored Venture. William Becker brought him to the surface and he was sent to a Baltimore hospital after being revived. Two other men, standing with Grigg on the bow of the Arla, were knocked overboard but were able to swim ashore.

Herbert Baker Dies; Once Oil Board Head

liminary fireworks. They explained the maneuver was to drum up an audience from early theater crowds downtown.

One of the daylight bombs released an American Flag on a parachute high over the Commerce Department Building. Another set the paper figure of a woman floating to the park at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, where small boys promptly tore it to shreds.

The ceremony of massing the colors and a parade of torch-bearing Boy and Girl Scouts was sandwiched between Barkley's oratory and the fireworks.

One and one-half tons of explosives were set off in the final 20 minutes of the program, a performance that reached its climax in an ear-spliting pyrotechnic naval battle before likenesses in fire of President Roosevelt, George Washington and the Statue of Liberty.

The appearance of the Roosevelt portrait with a sign in fireworks that read "God Bless America," brought cheers from the crowd.

D. A. R. Participate

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, was master of ceremonies. The celebration brought together representatives of 30 Washington D. A. R. chapters, including two descendants of members of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Artillery, oldest military unit in the United States.

Senator George Radcliff (Democrat), of Maryland, read excerpts from the Declaration of Independence. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, gave the invocation.

As the crowd leaving the monument began to tangle with throngs returning to the city from out-of-town holidays, Washington and suburban police were faced with badly snarled traffic jams.

One was along the Arlington Ridge road in nearby Arlington, where a line of cars blocked the highway for a mile and a quarter. Movement was impossible for more than half an hour. A similar line halted all travel from the Memorial Bridge to the Lee boulevard.

Athletic Events Held

The field events planned by the University Park Citizens Association at Fort Bayard Park began at 1 p. m., but was canceled when the first raindrops fell.

Athletic events at the Whittier School Playground, under the auspices of the Takoma Park Citizens Association continued until 4:30 p. m., with entries in the high jump class braving spills in the mud. The fireworks display arranged by the association at Hodges Farm, Philadelphia avenue and Maple street, was postponed until the first clear night.

At Taft Recreation Center, the second game in the double-header between the Taft Athletic Club and the Virginia Indians, was called off. The first game, which was won by the Taft A. C., was interrupted between the fifth and sixth innings to permit a drill by Job's Daughters, East Gate Masonic Temple.

The Capital View Citizens Association went ahead with its parade. Both the parade and the patriotic exercises took place at East Capitol street in front of the Capital View Community House, instead of the deluged field at Fifty-third and Ames streets northeast. Fireworks were set off at 8:30 p. m. at Fifty-fifth and North Capitol streets—blocked off by special police order—instead of at the field.

Wind, rain and slippery grass were too much for the "knights" at Oxon Hill, Md., whose tournament was to have taken place at 3 p. m. It was abandoned.

30 Children Form Junior Safety Group

Hear Traffic Talks And Take Pledge To Be Careful, Set Good Example

A frontal attack on the most serious cause of accidents among children—carelessness on the streets—was launched last night in the Agriculture Department auditorium when 30 children became the first members of the newly formed Junior Safety Council.

While thousands were gathering on the Monument Grounds just across the road to witness the community's "safe and sane" fireworks display, this vanguard of safety crusaders took the membership pledge in the war on traffic danger. Phrase by phrase they responded in unison to the lead of M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic for the District.

The pledge was taken after safety talks by Linn C. Drake, executive in charge of the National Capital Area Council of Boy Scouts; H. V. Schreiber, safety engineer of the Capital Transit Co., and Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations.

"Be Prepared"

While Drake pointed out that accidents occur when people are so anxious to have their own way they don't care how they get it, Schreiber praised the Scout motto "Be Prepared" as the best way to prevent accidents.

Eldridge, decaring he hoped all the boys and girls in the city would sign the pledge, told the children to "take it back home" and remind their grandparents that old people are killed in traffic accidents more often than children.

To Set Example

Members of the new council pledged themselves to cross the street with te green light at intersections; not to step between parked cars; not to play in the street; to ride bicycles carefully, to set an example and to help younger children to follow the rules.

The meeting adjourned after a motion picture illustrating the safety rules, and Chairman Charles L. Carr promised frequent meetings during the summer with entertainment and a drive for city-wide membership. The council is sponsored by the Washington Junior Board of Commerce, of which Carr is vice president.

Worrells Head Both Va. Units Of U. S. W. V.

Roanoke, Va., July 4 (AP).—Husband and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Worrell, of Petersburg, were named commander and president, respectively, of the Virginia department, United Spanish War Veterans, and auxiliary, this morning in the closing business session of the thirtieth annual encampment here.

The veterans also passed resolutions asking revision of the alcohol beverage control laws, providing for a trial by jury for violators and asking the Legislature to declare June 4 a legal holiday to commemorate the ride of Jack Jouett during the Revolutionary War to save Thomas Jefferson and other Virginia patriots from capture by the British forces.

L. E. Wingfield and E. E. Hawkins, both of Lynchburg, were named to posts of senior vice commander and marshal. In the only contested election of the veterans' meeting, R. C. Wymer, of Staunton, was selected as junior vice commander over E. J. Hewitt, of Richmond, and W. C. Harris, of Phoebus.

Soapbox Auto Injures Boy, 8, At Greenbelt

John Waters, jr., 8, of Riverdale, Md., was the victim of a freak "traffic" accident during the Fourth of July celebration at Greenbelt yesterday.

The youngster suffered a broken leg when he was struck by a toy auto in the course of a soap box derby race at the Government-owned town. He was taken to the Greenbelt hospital.

Director of Safety Wallace Nabee said James Bordas, 11, of Berwyn, lost control of his "auto" and crashed into the Waters boy, who was seated 4 or 5 feet off the course.

State D. A. V. Elects Capt. I. L. Daniels

Capt. I. L. Daniels, commander of Alexandria Chapter No. 12, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, was elected senior vice commander of the State Department at its three-day meeting in Richmond over the week-end, it was announced yesterday.

The Alexandria Chapter was awarded a silver medal in recognition of having acquired the most new members during the past year.

Daniels attended the convention with Richard K. Chapman, local adjutant.

Japanese Ruin Chinese Art, Says Composer

Ida Hoyt Chamberlain Sounds Appeal for U. S. Aid to Culture

An appeal for American aid in the preservation of Chinese art, threatened by Japanese aggression, was voiced last night by Miss Ida Hoyt Chamberlain, Washington woman composer, singer and pianist.

Speaking at a garden party sponsored by the Washington Committee for Aid of China at the home of Arthur C. Smith, 2949 Macomb street northwest, Miss Chamberlain declared that the age-old Chinese culture has been violently "disturbed," and is on the brink of "perishing" at the hands of the Japanese invaders.

Asserting she spoke from first hand knowledge, gained in four years in the Orient, Miss Chamberlain warned that not only China, but this country is "greatly menaced" by Japan.

The author of "Enchanted Isle" and other musical productions in this country, Miss Chamberlain was visiting her brother, Culver B. Chamberlain, now a Washington attorney but formerly American consul in Manchuria, during the first Japanese invasion in 1932.

Becoming interested in the Chinese cause, she gave the proceeds of a concert to a Chinese relief organization. She was made an honorary president of the Chinese Famine Relief Commission and given a decoration she wore last night.

Miss Chamberlain, who now is at work on a symphony based on "The Never Ending Wrong," Chinese legend symbolizing the fall of the Tong dynasty, spoke after a recital of oriental music, played on the butterfly lute, the moon guitar and the two-string violin by four Chinese businessmen.

When Do We Play? Holiday Workers Ask

Great Riddle of '39 Is 'Do We Get Back The Extra Time Put In?'

What history may call the Great July 4 Riddle of 1939 took root and flowered yesterday in the breasts of some scores of Capital parks workers, who worked all day while the rest of the citizens made holiday.

This great question they stated, in substance, as follows:

"Will we, or will we not, get back later on these holidays that we're working?"

So Others Could Play

The riddle stretched its tendrils across the Interior Department switchboard, where one little telephone operator patiently rang offices for callers until they got tired of waiting and hung up, or got tired of ringing and reported, "I'm sorry, but they don't answer."

This unresponsiveness leaves in doubt just how many civil servants wrestled yesterday with the Great Riddle, while they opened up clogged drinking fountains, latched and unlatched gates, shooed picnickers off the park flowers and did the other things needful for the public to enjoy the Fourth of July.

Opinion was divided. A guard who routed holiday traffic up the Washington Monument and down again was pretty depressed about it all. "The executive order said the holidays were for employes who could be spared," he explained. "Well, I figure we can't be spared."

Phone Operator Gives Up

A maintenance man who had just fished a little girl out of 6 inches of water beside a fountain, had some hope. "Of course, we have to work," he thought, "but we'll get the time back."

The telephone operator gave up on the riddle. "But if you want to hold on awhile," she said, "I'll ring So-and-so again and maybe he can tell you."

But So-and-so did not answer.

Boy Celebrants Shoot Outside, Repent Inside

Two Fourth of July-conscious Maryland boys who picked the front of the Bethesda Police Station for their celebrating were detained there under arrest last night.

The youths, 16 and 17, tossed firecrackers onto the sidewalk fronting the police station as they sped by in an automobile. Also passing the stationhouse and interested witnesses were Policemen R. L. Dutrow and E. L. Thompson.

Also charged with throwing firecrackers from a moving vehicle, at the Bethesda station was a 17-year-old Kensington boy. He was arrested on old Georgetown road.

Brewster Thinks Roosevelt Could Be Renominated

Bangor, Me., July 4 (AP).—Representative Ralph O. Brewster (Republican), Maine, declared tonight "almost everyone" in Washington agreed President Roosevelt could be renominated if he desired, and "most think he's willing."

In fact, added Brewster in a radio speech, "it becomes increasingly apparent no one else can be nominated who would embody the issues for which the Administration has fought . . . No other New Dealer has the slightest chance."

Asserting Attorney General Murphy "is being groomed for Vice President with Roosevelt," Brewster said. Murphy's attempt to "blanket" Republican Thomas E. Dewey by a "purge" of machine Democrats has only served to whet the public appetite," and said purification of politics might be the dominant issue in 1940.

"For such a scene," Brewster declared, Dewey was "made to order." However, he added, "Dewey has little strength as yet among the politicians," and he named Senators Vandenberg and Taft and Gov. Bricker of Ohio as "alternative possibilities . . . in about that order."

Schools Open Again For 10,000

Summer Classes Start at 8:30 a. m.; Will Continue Through August 11

School starts again today for 10,000 pupils here.

Summer sessions in elementary schools, junior and senior highs, will get under way at 8:30 a. m. to continue through 1 p. m. Classes will be held through August 11.

The students already have enjoyed a summer school vacation, as a prelude to study, since the opening was deferred from Monday in keeping with the President's order giving Government workers a special holiday. But the school vacation will have to be made up with special classes Saturday, and the following Saturday, July 15.

Eighteen hundred students are expected to appear for classes at Roosevelt High School. Classes for junior high school pupils will be held at Powell Junior High, with a forecast enrollment of 1,500.

Elementary work will be given at Addison, Blair, Brown, Buchanan, Burroughs, Emery, Fairbrother, Park View, Wallach, Webb, West and Webster schools.

Colored pupils will study at Dunbar High School and at Garnet-Patterson, for junior high work.

Students taking the summer courses include those making up subjects in which they have failed, those repeating work to strengthen their background and those taking advanced work. Sixth grade students planning to take advanced work will be assigned to junior high schools.

Churches Hail Democracy As Religious

Jefferson Spoke for Entire World, Greek Congregation Told

The foundation of democracy is the spiritual equality of men, Soterios Nicholson, local barrister, said last night in an Independence Day message at Saints Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church hall:

"America is democracy . . . tested and triumphant," he declared. ". . . Men spiritually are brothers because all men, spiritually, are sons of one Father. Democracy, therefore, is religion—a religion which transcends sectarianism and sectionalism; which is, in fact, the very essence of communion with eternal . . ."

"The heart of Jefferson, in writing the Declaration, and of Congress, in adopting it, beat for all humanity," asserted Nicholson. "The assertion of right was made for the entire world and all coming generations.

"We celebrate today no idle tradition, the deeds of no fabulous race, for we tread in the scarcely obliterated footsteps of an earnest and valiant generation of men."

In another holiday message, the Rev. Alvin Lamar Wills, speaking over Station WRC on the daily religious broadcast, warned that America's chief danger was "not in forgetting that our forefathers first sought religious freedom and toleration, but in not caring whether our people have any faith or not."

"Such an attitude is a national menace," declared the speaker, rector of the Episcopal Church of Our Savior, Brookland, "for we scarcely need to be reminded that our nation was founded by religious people and was intended to be a religious nation."

The cleric warned that "we must also guard against counterfeit freedom, that so-called freedom that is indulged in by extreme individualists who do as they please and disregard the equal rights of others."

Woodrum Urges Adequate Defense To Assure Peace

Roanoke, Va., July 4 (AP).—A warning that in the search for peace America "must not blind her eyes to the realities that confront us" was sounded by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum of the Sixth Virginia District in a speech delivered today at Big Island's combined celebration of Independence Day and of the completion of the 22-mile highway link between Bedford and Big Island.

"As has been so aptly said, peace cannot be had merely by wishing for it," the Congressman declared, stressing the need for adequate national defense.

"We must, in a reasonable, orderly and constructive manner see to it that if the occasion should ever arise when the security and tranquility of the American people were threatened by any foe, we should be in a position to defend our rights to have peace," he said.

No. 1 Transocean Air Passenger Enthuses Over Clipper Flight

E. J. Eck, Washington Rail Executive, Says Trip Worth 9-Year Wait for the First Ticket; to Broadcast in N. Y. Tonight

The Nation's No. 1 commercial airline passenger relaxed at his Washington home last night, still smacking his lips over his breakfast the day before at Lisbon, Portugal.

He is E. J. Eck, of 53 Adams street northwest, just returned from the first commercial transatlantic flight, which took him to the Azores, Lisbon, Marseilles, Paris and return in less than a week. He held the first ticket on the trip, having applied for it almost nine years ago, when transoceanic flights were still a sheet of paper in the Pan-American Airways' "ideas-to-think-about" file.

Despite having put 49,000 miles of airplane travels behind him in the past decade, Eck was anything but blase over his latest trip.

"It was perfect," he enthused. "Not a thing marred the trip. Wonderful weather, complete comfort, magnificent cloud effects—the time passed like that," and he snapped his fingers.

Eck related that the huge clipper kept well above the clouds, at 8,000 to 10,000 feet, throughout most of the trip over the ocean, with both nights at sea bright under a full moon.

Although he is assistant to the vice president of the Southern Railway, Eck has no hesitation in going places in a hurry by plane. He does not believe the airlines are competitive with the railroads as each serves a different purpose and clientele. His past flights included the first trip around South America and a London-to-Cape Town, South Africa, jaunt.

He will broadcast tonight on the radio "Hobby Lobby" program from New York.

Capital News In Brief

2 Capsizings, No One Hurt

Minor July 4 mishaps were confined to two capsizings, the first being a canoe in the Potomac off Heurich's Brewery in which two unidentified young men, equipped both with ability and costume for swimming, suffered nothing worse than an unplanned dip.

In the afternoon squall which overturned the canoeists, the 16-foot sailboat Gaido was tipped over off the War College Point. Its occupants, Lowell Palmes, 17 of 1900 F street northwest, and James Folston, 22, of 506 Twenty-second street northwest, were rescued by the motor launch of John W. Lumsden. The boat was recovered by Harbor Police.

Ickes' Aide Sun Victim

Holidaying at Rehoboth Beach, Del., Undersecretary of Interior Harry Slattery, found the sun a bit too warm yesterday and had to enter a hospital for severe sunburn. An upset digestion complicated matters. His condition was reported as not serious.

Man Beaten, Robbed

Paul Scott, 39, of 621 Acker street northeast, is in serious condition at Gallinger Hospital, suffering from contusions on the head and shoulders and internal injuries, as a result of being held up by two men at First and H streets northwest, under the railroad overpass.

The assailants beat Scott and then robbed him of 80 cents.

Record Pig Crop Forecast in Md.

College Park, Md., July 4 (AP).—The Maryland crop reporting service estimated the State's 1939 spring pig crop today at 179,000 pigs, a 20 per cent increase over the 1938 spring crop, and forecast a record production for the year.

"If the 1939 fall pig crop equals present expectations, the combined spring and fall pig crops this year will be about 10 per cent more than in 1938, 52 per cent above the 1928-1937 yearly average and the largest on record," the service said.

Gang of 25 Boys Beats 2 Policemen Over Sparklers

A gang of 25 youths beat up two District policemen yesterday in a fight over a boy's sparklers.

The police, Edward G. Comminger, 42, of 505 Second street northeast, of the Traffic Bureau, and Henry Matney, 40, of 2220 Eighteenth street northwest, of Thirteenth Precinct Station, were in Casualty Hospital last night suffering from severe head injuries and possible fractured skulls.

The fight began when the youths took the sparklers from Comminger's 13-year-old son, Edward, jr., near his home. The boy called for his father, who went out of the house with Matney. The gang jumped the police and dispersed only when more police arrived. Three youths were arrested.

131 Washington Rookies Attend C. M. T. C. Camp

Beginning tomorrow, 3,400 rookies will be "in the Army now," when the Citizens Military Training Corps camp at Fort Meade, Md., gets under way for a month's training. One hundred thirty-one rookies hail from the District.

The miltary civilians, coming from Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, as well as Washington, will receive a basic first year course under the direction of 79 reserve officers of the 320th Infantry here, commanded by Col. John V. Richards.

The enrollees will constitute 14 infantry companies, two signal companies and a band. Their final review, at which awards will be presented, will be on visitors' day, July 29.

Pay Unlikely Today for 9,600 Needy

D. C. Funds Tied Up Behind Senate Row Over Money; Action Possible Tomorrow

Little hope was held out last night that the District's 9,600 relief recipients would be mailed their checks today—checks five days overdue.

District funds tied up in the House-Senate dispute over the Federal contribution, officials refused to comment on possibility the 9,600 needy, blind, and aged—for whom monthly checks mean sustenance—might have to wait until Congress finds a solution to its stalemate.

And last night Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, leader in the fight to obtain an increased Federal share in District government expenses, revealed there was almost no chance of further action on the District supply bill today since the Senate is scheduled to debate the conferees compromise on the dollar devaluation power bill and won't vote on that issue until 5 p. m.

Overton, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, said he would attempt tomorrow to gain Senate approval of his formula, which would apportion this year close to $8,000,000 as the Federal payment for District services.

Then, the Louisiana Senator pointed out, he would be in position to bargain with the House conferees, who already have been instructed for a second time to stick by the lower chamber's offer of $5,000,000 as the Federal contribution. Thus, at best, favorable action on the issue could not be expected until Friday.

But with the House apparently adamant against increasing the appropriation, and with the Senate conferees willing to compromise but equally convinced that the District should get more Federal funds, observers believed the controversy might drag over to next week.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, and Otto Cass, new public assistance director who takes over the management of relief administration, will meet this morning with other officials in an attempt to ease the situation until at least the middle of the month.

Mrs. Hutchinson, D. C. Resident For 35 Years, Dies

Mrs. Minnie Berry Hutchinson, Washington resident for more than 35 years, died yesterday after a long illness at her home, 619 Seventh street northeast.

The wife of the late Gilbert M. Hutchinson, she was a native of Rappahannock County, Va., and a descendant of the Berry family which founded Berryville, Va. Despite her prolonged ill health, she was active in the Eastern Presbyterian Church and was stewardship chairman of the Presbyterian Synod.

She is survived by a son, Dr. J. Raymond B. Hutchinson; a daughter, Mrs. John C. Starns, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the Hines funeral establishment. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Grieashamer Dies Here at 82

Mrs. Margaret A. Grieashamer died yesterday at her residence, 3815 Fifth street northwest. She was 82.

A native of Bloomington, Ill., Mrs. Grieashamer came to Washington five years ago. She leaves a son, Alex R., of Washington; 3 grandchildren, Robert E., Edward R., and Betty L. Grieashamer, and a great-grandchild, Carol Lee Grieashamer.

Services will be at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will follow in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Nats-Yankees Split; 61,808 Honor Lou Gehrig

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

THIS MORNING WITH SHIRLEY POVICH:

'Iron Horse' Breaks As Athletic Greats Meet in His Honor

New York, July 4.—I saw strong men weep this afternoon, expressionless umpires swallow hard, and emotion pump the hearts and glaze the eyes of 61,000 baseball fans in Yankee Stadium. Yes, and hard-boiled news photographers clicked their shutters with fingers that trembled a bit.

POVICH

It was Lou Gehrig Day at the stadium, and the first 100 years of baseball saw nothing quite like it. It was Lou Gehrig, tributes, honors, gifts heaped upon him, getting an overabundance of the thing he wanted least—sympathy. But it wasn't maudlin. His friends were just letting their hair down in their earnestness to pay him honor. And they stopped just short of a good, mass cry.

They had Lou out there at home plate between games of the double-header, with the 60,000 massed in the triple tiers that rimmed the field, microphones and cameras trained on him, and he couldn't take it that way. Tears streamed down his face, circuiting the most famous pair of dimples in baseball, and he looked chiefly at the ground.

Seventy-year-old Ed Barrow, president of the Yankees, who had said to newspapermen, "Boys, I have bad news for you," when Gehrig's ailment was diagnosed as infantile paralysis two weeks ago, stepped out of the background halfway through the presentation ceremonies, draped his arm across Gehrig's shoulder. But he was doing more than that. He was holding Gehrig up, for big Lou needed support.

Ruth, Meusel, Hoyt, Pennock

As he leaned on Barrow, Gehrig said: "Thanks, Ed." He bit his lip hard, was grateful for the supporting arm, as the Yankees of 1927 stepped to the microphone after being introduced. Babe Ruth, Bob Meusel, Waite Hoyt, Herb Pennock, Benny Bengough, Bob Shawkey, Mark Koenig, Tony Lazzeri, all of the class of '27 were there. And Gehrig had been one of them, too. He had been the only one among them to bestride both eras.

Still leaning on Barrow, Gehrig acknowledged gifts from his Yankee mates, from the Yankee Stadium ground crew, and the hot dog butchers, from fans as far as Denver, and from his New York rivals, the Giants. There was a smile through his tears, but he wasn't up to words. He could only shake the hands of the small army of officials who made the presentations.

He stood there twisting his doffed baseball cap into a braid in his fingers as Manager Joe McCarthy followed Mayor La Guardia and Postmaster General Farley in tribute to "the finest example of ball player, sportsman and citizen that baseball has ever known," but Joe McCarthy couldn't take it that way, either. The man who has driven the highest-salaried prima donnas of baseball into action, who has baited a thousand umpires, broke down.

"You Were Never a Hindrance"

McCarthy openly sobbed as he stood in front of the microphone and said, "Lou, what else can I say expect that it was a sad day in the life of everybody who knew you when you came to my hotel room that day in Detroit and told me you were quitting as a ball player because you felt yourself a hindrance to the team. My God, man, you were never that."

And as if to emphasize the esteem in which he held Gehrig though his usefulness to the Yankees as a player was ended, McCarthy, too, stepped out of the fringe full into the circle where Gehrig and Barrow stood and half embraced the big fellow.

Now it was Gehrig's turn to talk into the microphone, to acknowledge his gifts. The 60,000 at intervals had set up the shout, "We want Lou!" even as they used to shout, "We want Ruth"—yells that they reserved for the only two men at Yankee Stadium for which the crowd ever organized a cheering section.

But Master of Ceremonies Sid Mercer was anticipating Gehrig. He saw the big fellow choked up. Infinitesimally Gehrig shook his head, and Mercer announced: "I shall not ask Lou Gehrig to make a speech. I do not believe that I should."

Then Lou Made a Speech

They started to haul away the microphones. Gehrig half turned toward the dugout, with the ceremonies apparently at an end. And then he wheeled suddenly, strode back to the loud-speaking apparatus, held up his hand for attention, gulped, managed a smile and then spoke.

"For weeks," said Gehrig, "I have been reading in the newspapers that I am a fellow who got a tough break. I don't believe it. I have been a lucky guy. For 16 years, into every ball park in which I have ever walked, I received nothing but kindness and encouragement. Mine has been a full life."

He went on, fidgeting with his cap, pawing the ground with his spikes as he spoke, choking back emotions that threatened to silence him, summoning courage from somewhere. He thanked everybody. He didn't forget the ball park help; he told of his gratitude to newspapermen who had publicized him. He didn't forget the late Miller Huggins, or his six years with him; or Manager Joe McCarthy, or the late Col. Ruppert, or Babe Ruth, or "my roommate, Bill Dickey."

And he thanked the Giants—"The fellows from across the river, who we would give our right arm to beat"—he was more at ease in front of the mike now, and he had a word for Mrs. Gehrig and for the immigrant father and mother who had made his education, his career, possible. And he denied again that he had been the victim of a bad break in life. He said, "I've lots to live for, honest."

And thousands cheered.

Anything but "Iron" were the emotions of the Yankees' Lou Gehrig yesterday when 61,808 spectators crowded into Yankee Stadium to watch the world champions battle Washington to a split double-header and celebrate "Gehrig Day." Another former Yankee star, Babe Ruth (right), was on hand to cheer him up, however.

Alice Marble, Sarah Fabyan In Semifinals

Helen Jacobs Loses; All-American Finals Loom at Wimbledon

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Wimbledon, England, July 4.—Kay Stammers, of England, the magazine cover beauty with the stunning profile, eliminated Helen Jacobs, 6—2, 6—2, in the quarter-finals of the all-England women's singles tennis championship today, but United States Champion Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan made up for that by advancing to the semifinals.

Miss Marble, who looks good enough to win the men's title, overwhelmed Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, 6—1, 6—4. Mrs. Fabyan, who came within a point of beating Miss Marble at Forest Hills last year, trimmed the French champion, Mrs. Rene Mathieu, 6—4, 6—2.

In Thursday's semifinals it will be Mrs. Fabyan against Miss Stammers, whom she has beaten each of the three times they have met, and Miss Marble against Mrs. Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Denmark. Mrs. Sperling, a former German titleholder, won the other quarter-final from Ruth Hardwick, of England, 6—4, 6—0.

The men's semifinals will be played tomorrow. Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, will meet Ferenc Puncec, of Yugoslavia, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., will face Henner Henkel, German Davis Cupper.

Miss Jacobs has reached the finals of this championship six times and only once has she come through. All manner of tragedy has followed the Berkeley, Calif., veteran on the ivy-fringed center court, and today was no exception.

When she came out to face Miss Stammers before packed stands, Helen looked pale and tired. Always a magnificent retriever, today she could not run and, what's more important, she could not hold her service.

In the very first game she lost her service at love and, while she managed to break through Miss Stammers in the second to tie the score, she never was ahead even by a single point. Only once in the entire match did Helen win her own service.

All this, of course, says nothing about the grace and beauty of Miss Stammers, about the sting of her southpaw forehand and the determination with which she forced a listless opponent to run about the court.

Never has "Katy" looked better. Her forehand pitched relentlessly into Miss Jacobs' backhand corner. She murdered Helen's sliced returns. She had pace and perfect length and boy, she was beautiful.

61,808 See Yankees And Nats Split Bill

Dutch Leonard, Knuckle Ball Working Perfectly, Hangs Up Third Victory Over Champions, 3-2; Yanks Win Second, 11-1

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 4.—Like an expensive bit of fireworks, the Nats flashed, sparkled brilliantly and zoomed into the heights today (Washington, 3; Yankees, 2), only to explode later with a loud bang, sputter and come down to earth (Yankees, 11; Washington, 1.)

That's what happened in the double-header today at Yankee Stadium, where the season's largest baseball crowd, 61,808, out to honor Lou Gehrig, saw the Washington club win the first game and fail dismally in an attempt to sweep both parts of the bill.

But you citizens of Auburn, Ill., stand up and cheer. Rustle out the bunting and bang the welkin. It isn't merely the Fourth of July. One of your boys, Dutch Leonard, has done it again. He beat the Yankees again, that's what he did—beat 'em with his knuckle ball, and definitely.

His Third Over Yanks

The Nats gave him only 3 runs to work with, but he made them stand up, beautifully, in a duel with Monte Pearson. Leonard's victory was notable. Last week he became the only pitcher in the league to beat the Yankees more than once. Today was his third triumph over the club against which no other winning pitcher has ever repeated.

But in that second game the Nats were in the same degree as inept, as impotent as they were brilliant in the opener. They gave the Yankees a bundle of cheap runs with lax fielding, and they could stir up no more than six hits against the pitching of Steve Sundra.

Alex Alexandra was the victim of the Yankees in the second game. He walked from the ceremonies at home plate where a delgation of New York Venezuelans honored him as their only countryman in the big leagues, into a storm of Yankee hits and Washington errors, and he lasted only three innings.

Errors Are Costly

Alexandra pitched well enough to shut the Yankees out during his brief turn on the mound, but all six of the runs he yielded bore the taint of Washington errors that both did and did not find their way into the box scores.

That first game, however, was something to write home about. It was the Nats' answer to New York fans' curiosity as to how the lowly Washington club has been able to break even in ten games with the Yankees this season.

Big Leonard, displaying superb control of his difficult knuckle ball, surrendered only six hits to the Yankees, never more than one to an inning. And he had little margin to work with. The run that gave the Nats a 3-1 lead in the fourth inning was their last of the game. In the last five innings they made only one hit against the Yankee pitching.

Back in the first inning the Nats had nudged Pearson for two runs after West led off the game with a walk. The runs were scored after two were out, on singles delivered by Wright, Travis and Myer. There might have been more runs save for the fact that Travis overslid.

Taber Hits 4 Homers And Ties Lazzeri's Mark Made in 1936

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 4.—The Boston Red Sox staged a holiday hit parade to club the Athletics into submission in both ends of a double-header today, beating them, 17 to 7, in the opener and 18 to 12 in the nightcap.

Jim Tabor slammed out four home runs in the twin bill. Three of them were in the second game, two with the bases loaded, duplicating Tony Lazzeri's major league record established May 24, 1936.

Tabor had plenty of home-run company in the opening tilt with Ted Williams, Joe Cronin, Bobby Doerr, Bob Johnson, Sam Chapman

Here's What Fans Presented Gehrig; D. C. Sends Scroll

New York, July 4 (AP).—Here is a list of the presents Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees received at the celebration today:

The Yankee Club gave him a silver service set; the Yankee players a silver trophy; the New York Giants a fruit bowl and two candle sticks; the Stevens employes (caterers at the park) two silver platters; from Hal, Frank and Joe Stevens a silver pitcher and the baseball writers gave him a smoking stand.

He also got a fishing rod and tackle from the stadium employes, a loving cup from the office staff at thes tadium and the downtown office, a ring from a jewelry firm (Dieges & Clust) and two scrolls, one from Washington, D. C., fans and the other from the "Old Timers' Association" of Denver, Colo.

Lawson Little Second As Bruen Shoots a 69

19-Year-Old English Star Paces Field With 138; U. S. Hope and Cotton, Favorite, Are Tied With 142 in British Open

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 4.—Jim Bruen, the baby-faced, 19-year-old Irish amateur, thumbed his nose at ancient St. Andrews today. With the greatest display of consistent golf this course has seen since the days of "R. T. Jones, esquire," he shot his second 69 in two days to lead 129 qualifiers for the British Open Golf Championship.

Disdaining any let-up, which would have been quite allowable under the circumstances, Bruen went out and attacked the par 72 new course and finished the two days' 36 holes with a total of 138.

This astounding coup took the day's honors away from England's Henry Cotton and America's Lawson Little, who had ruled the field until Bruen came home just before nightfall. They had two-day totals of 142, Cotton getting his on a four under par 69 on the old course today, while Little, who shot a 69 there yesterday, took 73 strokes over the new course.

Cotton Slight Favorite

Behind these three, of whom Cotton, because of his command of all his clubs is the slight favorite, came a mixed field that included Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, and England's veteran Percy Allis. Bulla worried through a round of 71 despite "putter trouble" for his 143, while Allis, who had tied Bruen and Little for the lead yesterday, fell off to a 74 for the same total.

The third lowest score, just behind them, belonger to Reginald Whitcombe, the defending champion, who played solidly and without fireworks for 144 on a pair of 72's. The rest of the field streamed out behind. Martin Pose, who led six Argentine qualifiers, and Jock McLean, Scotland's hope, were coupled at 145. Each had 73 today.

George Low, jr., of Jenkintown, Pa., son of one of America's veteran professionals, failed to qualify. The Royal and Ancient took the first 129, which included those with scores of 156 or better, and left Low, who came down from an opening 81 to 76 and 18 others who tied at 157 out of it.

Compston Has 147

Back of the leaders came a host of golfers from all over the world, with such prominent Britons as Archie Compston (147), former amateur champion Hector Thomson (148) and amateur champion Alex Kyle (150) still very much in the fight. Bobby Locke, the South African star whose friends' betting hammered him down to 6-1 second choice, had 147.

He still feels confident he will be in the first five from now on. But of the field which plays 18 holes tomorrow, 18 more Thursday and then enters the grueling 36-hole final on Friday, Bruen is the boy the public is interested in—although Cotton and Little are respected.

Handicap Won By Challedon

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 4.—W. L. Brann's favored Challedon raced to within a fifth of a second of the track record today as he won the $15,000 added Yankee Handicap, 1 3-16 miles, by a length at Suffolk Downs. Greentree's Hash ran second, two lengths in front of Charlie Trotter's Silent Witness. The time was 1:56 2-5.

Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Lovely Night, and Day Off, other half of the Greentree entry, set a scorching pace for almost a mile, with Challedon, victor in the Preakness over Belair's Johnstown, well off the pace until going to the half-mile pole. Previously, Jockey Harry Richards kept him last.

When he started his move, the bay colt ate up ground as the two tired leaders came back to him. Hash had been third, two lengths off the leaders, and made his move when Challedon came up on the outside nearing the quarter pole.

Challedon, well on the outside of Lovely Night which had gone ahead of Day Off, finished stoutly with plenty of running room. Hash was in close quarters but came on again in the final eighth to close in on Challedon, but the Maryland-bred colt was being eased down by Richards. Silent Witness nosed out Lovely Night for the show.

Lieut. Russel Bows, 7—5, 4—6, 7—5, in Match at Columbia

By Jack Munhall.

Soft-spoken 19-year-old Davie Johnsen, the promising young tennis player whose continual complacency on the courts has caused some to doubt his courage under fire, yesterday dispelled any such beliefs with one of the gamest comebacks of the local season.

Trailing 5—2 and 40—15 in the deciding set of his quarter-final match of the District men's championships at Columbia, Johnsen popped up with an incredible rally to eliminate Lieut. H. C. Russell, of Fort Kelley, Texas, by the scores of 7—5, 4—6, 7—5.

The City of Washington champion thus joined second-seeded Hugh Lynch in the semi-final bracket which will not be completed until this afternoon. Matches between Barney Welsh and Frank Shore and Dooly Mitchell and Buddy Adair, rained out yesterday, are scheduled at 5 o'clock.

Cunningham Beaten In 1,500 Meter Run

By the Associated Press

Lincoln, Nebr., July 4.—Eleven defending champions lost their titles, the record book battled a record-ruining breeze and favorites "ate dust" from dark horses today in the fifty-first senior track and field meet of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Before more than 8,000 spectators in Nebraska's Memorial Stadium, Glenn Cunningham became one of the beaten titleholders as Blaine Rideout, of the Shore Athletic Club, Elberon, N. J., pulled the big surprise of the afternoon by winning the much-talked of 1,500-meter run.

Cunningham, long-time dominator of the Nation's distance track stars, could do no better than fourth as Rideout won in the fair time of three minutes 51.5 seconds. Charles (Chuck) Fenske, expected to battle Cunningham for first place, was second and almost caught Rideout with a fine "stretch kick." Louis Zamperini, of the Southern California Athletic Association, closed fast to nip Cunningham out of third place.

A tail wind which early in the program reached a velocity of 9.7 miles an hour, ruined what would have been new marks in the 100-meter dash and 110-meter hurdles. Clyde Jeffery, of the San Francisco Olympic Club, which won the team title with 45 points, won the 100-meter dash title in 10.2 seconds, equalling Jesse Owens' world mark. But the performance was not allowed as a record because A. A. U. rules stipulate the tail wind must be less than 4.5 miles per hour.

In the 110-meter hurdles, Joe Joe Batiste, of Tucson, Ariz., captured the title in 14.1 seconds, equalling the Olympic and American marks, but the assisting breeze nullified that performance as a new mark. In the first trial heat, Fred Wolcott, the defending champion, had stepped the distance in 13.8 as the breeze lifted him over the barriers. He lost by an inch to Batiste in the finals.

But four new and legal marks did enter the book. Late in the afternoon and with the wind as negligible as the sun was hot, Wolcott made up for his title loss by retaining his 200-meter hurdles crown in 22.9 seconds. This clipped four-tenths of a second off the old meet mark.

Greg Rice, Notre Dame star, won

Alexandra Feted By Countrymen In New York

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 4.—A radio, a wrist watch, a traveling bag and a diploma were presented Alex Alexandra in ceremonies before the second game of today's double-header by a delegation of Venezuelans living in New York.

Alexandra, only Venezuelan ever to wear a big league uniform, was introduced to the crowd of 61,808 by Dr. Tomas Pacanins, consul general of Venezuela to New York.

Alex addressed a speech in Spanish to the throng through the loud-speaking system of the park.

Baltimore Runner Sets Record Winning District Marathon

10-Mile Run Won Easily By Heinicke

Finishes in 57:37; Schorb Takes D. C. A.A.U. Championship For Third Year

By Al Hailey.

Wearing an old pair of sports slippers he converted into running shoes, Donald Heinicke, of Baltimore, Md., yesterday pattered to an easy victory in the 10-mile modified marathon through Washington streets and set a new record for the annual Independence Day race of the Department of Playgrounds and Takoma Park citizens.

Heinicke covered the 10 miles between Roaches Run on Mount Vernon boulevard, and the Takoma Park swimming pool in 57 minutes and 37 seconds, clipping 29 seconds from the record set last year by Jim Kleinerman, of Pelham Manor, N. Y.

The 24-year-old Baltimore runner took command of the situation 5 minutes after Park Police Capt. Patrick J. Carroll fired the starting gun to send a pack of 36 aspiring distance runners out on the boulevard behind a special motorcycle police escort.

Heinicke, a member of the Stonewall Democratic Club, was never challenged thereafter, but steadily increased his lead. The favorites, Kleinerman and William Agee, also of Baltimore, did not finish the race.

Kleinerman Out

Kleinerman fell out at the foot of the Thirteenth street hill, at Florida avenue, with a splinter in his foot. Agee made an early stab at Heincke's lead but tired badly and dropped out after little more than 2 miles.

Two long city blocks behind Heincke at the finish line was Frank Kelly, of the Passon Athletic Club, Philadelphia, who covered the stretch in 58 minutes and 57 seconds. Andy Jones, North Carolina University student, finished third in 1 hour and 6 seconds.

George Schorb, of the Washington Track and Field Club, was the first Washington runner across the line. He finished sixth in 1 hour 2 minutes and 34 seconds to win the District Amateur Athletic Union 10-mile championship for the third year. He first won it in 1935.

John Leiss and Jimmy Carrick, who ran eleventh and twelfth, respectively, in the field, were the second and third District runners to finish. Leiss' time was 1 hour 8 minutes and 10 seconds; Carrick's 1 hour 8 minutes and 35 seconds.

Takoma Park Citizens trophies were awarded to the first six finishers, while the first three received special Fourth of July medals in addition. Gold medals were given the first 12 finishers and bronze Heinicke, running for the fifth time in the Playground Department event, moved into a 10-yard lead over the favored Kleinerman, of the St. Anselm's Athletic Club, at the start and increased it to 60 yards at the turn into Memorial Bridge. The loping Baltimore lad reached Logan Circle, the halfway mark, in 28 minutes flat. Kelly never was nearer than 150 yards to Heinicke in the last 5 miles. If he had been pressed it is likely that he would have clipped several minutes off the 1938 record.

All Kinds of Togs

The marathoners appeared at the start in every form of attire and foot wear. Alex Shayka, of Fort Meade, Md., private first class, merely removed his Army uniform and raced in his regular walking shoes. He finished next to last, thirty-second, in 1 hour 26 minutes and 37 seconds.

Followed by a covey of District taxicabs, Haskell Clark, the local taxi driver-marathoner, started out strong but weakened. He galloped in twenty-eighth in 1 hour 18 minutes and 43 seconds amid a fanfare of taxicab horns.

Agee, an unattached runner, who has won the marathon six times in the 11 years that it has been staged, and Bus Nicholson, of the Washington Track and Field Club, rode to the finish line in one of the ambulances following the widely scattered pack.

"I really wanted to win today," Heinicke panted at the finish. "I've been trailing Bill Agee too much."

Giants Lose Twin Bill To Boston

Scores Are 3-1, 10-2; Eight-Run Rally Wins Second Game in 8th

By International News Service.

Boston, July 4.—The Boston Bees today ran their victory string to six in a row when they whipped the New York Giants in both ends of a holiday doubleheader before 14,894 fans, taking the opener, 3 to 1, and the nightcap, 10 to 2.

An eight-run rally by Boston in the eighth inning of the second game provided the punch that steamrolled the Giants. Four Giant pitchers worked during the inning that saw 14 Bees go to the plate and produce eight hits, a walk and two sacrifices.

It was the first triumph of the year for Milt Shoffner. Bill Lohrman, who had hurled well for seven innings, was tagged with the loss.

Danny MacFayden stopped the Giants with six blows in the first game. Heinie Majeski supplied the power, driving in two runs and paving the way for the third.

Cubs, Cards Divide Two Real Thrillers

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 4.—The Chicago Cubs, although getting only 10 hits off four St. Louis pitchers, broke even with the Cards today in a holiday double-header before 26,409 fans, winning the second, 3 to 2, in 10 innings, after losing the first, 6 to 4.

Relief Pitcher Morton Cooper won the opener for the Cards with a two-run homer in the ninth, but the highlight of this game was Hank Lieber's three home runs in successive times at bat. He got three of the six hits off Bill McGee and Cooper and drove in all of the Cubs' runs. Joe Medwick smacked a home run in the sixth to send St. Louis ahead, but Leiber tied the count with his third circuit blow in Chicago's half of the sixth.

The second game was a sterling mound duel with the Cards having a 2 to 1 lead going into the last of the eighth. Then Pinch Hitter Gabby Hartnett, batting for Claude Passeau, blasted one out of the park to tie the score. It was one of the four hits off of Paul Dean and Curt Davis.

Davis hit Carl Reynolds with a pitched ball in the tenth inning and Dick Bartell lived on Medwick's error. Then Gus Mancuso singled Reynolds home with the decisive run.

593½-Lb. Marlin Reported Landed Off Carolina Coast

Elizabeth City, N. C., July 4 (A.P.).—Marshall Dana, of Cincinnati, Ohio, reported today he caught a blue marlin yesterday which was 13 feet 2 inches in length and weighed 593½ pounds—the largest ever caught off the North Carolina coast.

The fish, which was caught 17 miles off Hatteras Inlet, measured 62 inches in girth and had a tail spread of 52 inches.

Prince Olav First In Sail Race With No Punches Pulled

Marblehead, Mass., July 4 (A.P.).—With the skill of a Viking, Crown Prince Olav of Norway, sailed a trim 30-meter boat to victory today off this society summer colony in a 6-mile race in which "nobody pulled his punches."

OLAV

Taking his hand off the tiller only twice—both times to light a cigarette—the prince brought the "Moose," owned by John S. Lawrence, across the finish line 3 minutes ahead of C. P. Curtiss' Ellen, which was second.

Acknowledging the cheers of the usually sedate North Shore society folk who watched the race, feature of the Eastern Yacht Club's holiday regatta, the prince said, smiling, "it was a fine day."

56,272 Fans Watch Newsom Get Shutout; Crowd Sets Record

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 4.—Blustering Buck Newsom slapped a 4-to-0 shutout on the Cleveland Indians today to the joy of Detroit's biggest baseball crowd in history, 56,272 fans, but rain intruded to mar the holiday and end the second game of a doubleheader in the third inning.

While Newsom limited the Indians to three hits and struck out six men for his ninth victory of the year, the Tigers grouped their blows off Lefty Al Milnar for two runs in the fifth and two in the seventh and swung back into a virtual third-place tie with the Indians.

Scribes and Lawmakers to Hold Special Workout in New Togs

Drill Is Scheduled to Accustom Newshawks And Congressmen to Dazzling New Uniforms

In order that members of the Congressional and press teams, which clash tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium in a softball game to benefit the National Library for the Blind, may become accustomed to the dazzling new uniforms they will wear in the important engagements, a special workout will be held today with only photographers and newsreel men allowed on the premises.

Along with word of the final scrimmage, there was a report that President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Vice President John Garner would receive their invitations to the affair today. A press delegation will visit the President, and Representative Pius L. Schwert, captain of the Capitol Hill crew, will hand the bid to Mr. Garner.

In all, 19 Congressmen and three Senators will uphold the athletic banner of the legislators, while 17 newspapermen, including correspondents from every portion of the country, will do or die for the fourth estate. Tickets may be had at Griffith Stadium, Spalding's or the A. A. A.

Hydroplane Record Of 87 M. P. H. Is Set

Picton, Ont., July 4 (A.P.).—Jack (Pop) Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., broke the world record for a 225-cubic inch displacement hydroplane boat today in his Tops III., speeding over a measured mile on Lake Ontario at an average speed of 87.485 miles an hour.

The 68-year-old sportsman conformed to all regulations in setting the new mark, and officials of the American Power Boat Association were at hand for the run. The former mark was set by George Cannon, of Rockledge, Fla., who drove his Grey Goose at 85.950 m. p. h.

Cardinal A. C. Claims Division Championship

The Cardinal A. C., composed of players not over 17 years of age, are claiming the city championship of that division, basing their claim on an undefeated record after having participated in 25 games in that class. The Cardinals also are leading the National City Junior League. Teams desiring games call Manager Jack Hoffman, at Atlantic 5160.

Dun Lucky Wins Independence Handicap at Charles Town

Johnston's Star Equals Track Record

Winner Pays Off $7 For $2; Bargain Boy Second; Daily Double Brings Fans $194.80

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 4.—Racing as if a string of fire crackers was tied to his tail, Capt. Ewart Johnston's Dun Lucky led every jump of the way in the Independence Day Handicap here and equaled the track record in the bargain. Answering every urge of Jockey Boots Hernandez with speed and more speed, the gelded son of Dunlin arrived at the all-important wire a length in advance of E. A. Root's Bargain Boy. Four lengths farther back came T. Whiltshire's Armendias to be third. Six others made up the "also ran" division in the test of a mile and an eighth.

The crowd of 9,000 which stormed the plant here, installed Dun Lucky a mild favorite in the good field and he paid a $7 mutuel. His time of 1:52 4-5 for the route matched that set by Sitting Pretty and Its a Maid.

Jockey Hernandez lost no time in putting Dun Lucky on the front end. Once in command, he held the gelding under some wraps while shaking off an early challenge of Dixie Flapper. Approaching the back stretch, Jinneal moved up menacingly on the outside, but Dun Lucky shook her off. Turning for home, Armenias took a shot at the front-runner and then dropped back.

In the stretch, Bargain Boy, excelently handled by Jockey Lou Machado, began to put up a strong challenge. Hernandez looked over his shoulder, saw Bargain Boy and went to the whip. Dun Lucky responded in game fashion and clung to the lead as they went into the line.

The first of the double went to Veritas, a $5.60 favorite, ridden by Apprentice C. Walters. Beryl King, a 20-1 shot, led virtually all the way, only to fall victim of Veritas' closing bid.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHAMPPLEURY, $8.60, $5.00, $3.40; LIGHT ACTION, $6.80, $4.40; ASTERISK, $4.20.

CHAMPPLEURY saved ground in early stages, drove through on rail to improve position and came willingly under punishment to hold sway at end. LIGHT ACTION, slow to begin, rallied gamely to drive and closed full of run. ASTERISK, first away, saved ground setting pace and could not stay in final test despite energetic handling. BOULDERDAM lost much ground getting to contention and stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and nine-sixteenths miles. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 6:30. Off 6:30½. Winner, J. C. Clark's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ITSAMAID, $6.40, $3.60, $3.00; LITTLE WACKIE, $3.80, $3.40; CHANNING, $4.20.

ITSAMAID, not hurried in early stages while within striking distance of leaders, rallied gamely when placed to drive to take command boldly and drew clear to win with speed in reserve. LITTLE WACKIE, forward factor from beginning, was hard ridden, but was held safe. CHANNING went to front after a mile and weakened thereafter. HUPPY was used up running with CHIEF EVERGREEN. The latter set and pressed pace and tired badly.

ITSAMAID, not hurried in early stages while within striking distance of leaders, rallied gamely when placed to drive to take command boldly and drew clear to win with speed in reserve. LITTLE WACKIE, forward factor from beginning, was hard ridden, but was held safe. CHANNING went to front after a mile and weakened thereafter. HUPPY was used up running with CHIEF EVERGREEN. The latter set and pressed pace and tired badly.

Roanoke Man Wins Virginia Trapshoot Title

A. J. Wright Defeats R. J. Luttrell, Takes Singles Championship

By the Associated Press

Winchester, Va., July 4.—A. J. Wright, of Roanoke, scored 25 to his opponent's 22 in a shoot-off today, defeating R. J. Luttrell, of Roanoke, to win the State singles championship in the Virginia Trapshooters Association's annual tournament. Each had finished the eight-event feature of the program with 193.

C. J. Renner, of Winchester, captured the all-around championship with 331-350 and 381-400. A. J. Wright was runner-up with 326-350 and 373-400.

Tracy Lewis, of Keene, defeated Renner for the State doubles championship with 48-50 to 46-50. The nonresident doubles title went to F. E. Harris, Charleston, W. Va., 43-50.

Renner won the handicap event, 95-100. Wright, 92-100, was runner-up. T. K. Wynkoop, Bethesda, Md., took the nonresident handicap title with 92-100. W. H. McFarland, Keyser, W. Va., was runner-up with 91-100.

Scoring 241—250, the Winchester team was certified to the Grand American Handicap at Vandalia, Ohio. Members scores were E. E. Cuthbert, 47; C. J. Renner, 50; Ruth Cuthbert, 48; F. W. Pingley, 47, and W. F. Anderson, 49.

In the professional classes W. C. Efird, of Roanoke, took the State doubles with 33—50, the handicap with 91—100 and the all-around pro-State championship with 310—350.

C. L. Jordan, Richmond, was elected president of the association, succeeding Claude B. Stickley, Vaucluse. Other officers named were Homer Wilson, Richmond, vice president; Albert Suttle, Petersburg, secretary-treasurer and representative to the Amateur Trapshooting Association.

Treder-Dettweiler Break Even With Brown-Pitt at Manor

Service Club Match To Navy Golfers

Snow Wins Flag Tourney at Kenwood; LaBonte Paces Argyle Play; Rochelle Winner at Beaver Dam; Stowe Victor

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The mixed pro-amateur match at Manor finished all even yesterday, the professional duo of Al Treder, of the host club, and Helen Dettweiler, the Western Open champion, coming from behind three times on the back nine to tie Marion Brown and Harry Pitt, the well-known amateur members of the Norbeck Club.

Treder led the foursome with a three over par 73, including playing a majority of the back nine in a downpour that sent the gallery to shelter. Pitt had a 78, Miss Dettweiler an 84 and Miss Brown an 86.

The amateurs were two up leaving the first nine, but Treder won the tenth with a par and the eleventh with a birdie to square the match. The Brown-Pitt twosome took a one-hole lead on the fourteenth and sixteenth, but each time on the next hole Treder squared the match, and they halved the eighteenth to break even.

Maj. C. W. McLaren won the match play against par tourney at Manor, finishing three up, while Harry Cooper was all square with regulation figures and Dr. F. J. Broschard one down.

Mrs. R. D. Pittman won the women's flag event, finishing 5 yards from the tenth, or nineteenth cup. While Mrs. J. V. Brownell was 150 yards from the green and Mrs. H. A. Neff and Mrs. L. G. Pray in the cup on the eighteenth. Mrs. Harvey Cooper won the putting contest with 36 putts, while Mrs. B. G. Gamble had 40 for second and Nellie Mae Neff 41 for third.

ARMY AND NAVY

Navy's golfing members of the service club won the annual intra-club match with Army, 21½ to 17½, led by Commander W. S. Popham and Jimmy Stevens, the new District junior champion, who swept three points from Pro Allan Burton and K. Buchanan, Army's top duo. The winners had a best ball of 67.

Prize winners were Commander Popham, with low gross and net with 72-3, 69; Jimmy Stevens, Col. Buchanan, G. H. Heiss and Commander Pennoyer.

Navy, 21½; Army, 17½.

W. S. Popham and Jimmy Stevens, jr. (Navy), scored 3 points to 0 for Allan Burton and K. Buchanan; J. S. Phillips and E. P. Nixon (Navy) scored 3 points to 0 for C. W. Dunning and C. P. Barton; J. B. Olendorf and F. W. Pennoyer (Navy) scored 2½ points to ½ for J. H. Davidson and Jack Wade, jr.; George Stokes and P. L. Ransom (Army) scored 2 points to 1 for Frank Dunham, sr. and jr.; D. D. Wright and D. H. Pratt (Army) scored 5 points to 0 for C. P. Lattu and J. S. Foy; G. K. Heiss and L. W. Dillon (Army) scored 3 points to 0 for A. B. Clifford, jr. and sr.

G. H. Forster, jr., and Buddy Titus (Navy) scored 2½ points to ½ for G. H. Forster, sr., and Eric King; J. H. Stevens, sr., and R. D. Workman (Navy) scored 2½ points to ½ for F. M. Elliott and R. P. Freeman; F. L. Lowe and O. C. Badge (Navy) scored 3 points to 0 for G. Ellis and W. S. Freeman; S. South and Donald Curtiss (Navy) scored 2 points to 1 for G. E. Clark and R. J. Haas; A. S. Rice and G. D. Sutton (Army) scored 2 points to 1 for J. E. Gill and L. J. McClatchie; E. B. Chesney and R. B. Russell (Army) scored 3 points to 0 for J. L. Byrnes and H. L. Schaffer; Robert Bruce (Army) scored 2 points to 1 for S. W. Leverton.

KENWOOD

Chisox Rally To Take Pair From Browns

Five-Run Surge In Ninth Takes 2d, 7-4, After 7-3 Victory

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 4.—A 5-run ninth inning uprising started by Ollie Bejma's home run gave the Chicago White Sox a 7-to-4 victory over the St. Louis Browns in the second ame of a double-header today. The Sox won the first game, 7 to 3.

Hardy Golfers Finally Take to Shelter at Columbia

The rain that marred the final few holes in the Fourth of July golf tournament yesterday at Columbia Country Club didn't chase these linksmen to cover until the round was complete, but the porch shelter was welcome after it was over. Figuring up scores (left to right) are Maj. J. M. Epperley, M. J. Gormley (looking on), Dr. Paul M. Stewart, and George P. James.

21,299 Watch Dodgers Take Doubleheader

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 4.—Twice the dashing Dodgers dumped the tail-end Phillies here today, winning by scores of 6 to 3 and 8 to 6, before a holiday cannoncracker throwing crowd of 21,299.

The Phillies had a royal chance to win the second, when they scored 3 times in the eighth inning to tie the score against Hugh Casey.

But Ike Pearson and Hugh Mulcahy, who succeeded Ray Harrell on the mound for the Quakers, were unable to hold the Brooklyn attack. After three bases on balls, Art Parks, rookie outfielder, doubled to left, driving in 2 runs to clinch the verdict.

Tot Pressnell went the full route to quell the Quakers in the opener.

D. C. Schoolboy Loses National Net Match

Haverford, Pa., July 4 (AP).—Defending Champion Jack Kramer, of Los Angeles, made his debut in the first round of the national interscholastic tennis tournament today by toppling Ed Moylan, of Trenton, N. J., 6—3, 7—5. Edward Richardson, sole Washington, D. C., entry, put up a bitter fight in his match with Tom Price, of Cincinnati, but finally succumbed, 5—7, 6—4, 6—2.

Rocksie Wins Honors In Show at Culpeper

By Anne Hagner

Culpeper, Va., July 4.—Before a holiday crowd of more than 4,000 spectators, Margaret Cotter's famous bay gelding, Rocksie, showed the way to B. Bogert's Gay Cockade and a number of other brilliant fencers in the featured triple bar class of the Culpeper Horse Show, which would up its two-day stand near here today.

In three thrilling jump-offs that were almost replicas of the same event last year, Miss Cotter's personality horse evened up an old score with the Bogert entry, which copped the triple bar blue in 1938. This time Rocksie's triumph came as a result of his hitting the top of a wicked-looking 9-foot spread with his hind feet, while Gay Cockade and Edgewood Farm's Report each brought down the lowest pole with a front knockdown, which totals more faults in official scoring.

Crowd Thrilled

The crowd, made up mostly of Virginians who are used to the more tame variety of fencing seen in hunter classes, was thrilled at the brand of open jumping to which Washington audiences have become accustomed. Rocksie's greatest fame came when he topped a 6-foot 3-inch fence at the Washington Horse Show last month, following a notable triple bar victory at Atlantic City.

Second place in today's event went to Gay Cockade, with Jean Riley up, and third was taken by Redport, ridden by Alexander Rives. Rocksie also won the open jumping class earlier in the day. The hunter championship of the show went to Mrs. John Hay Whitney's good brown mare, Spring Hope, who won Reserve in the conformation hunter division at Washington. Spring Hope performed smoothly during both days of the show to add up 14 points toward the tri-color.

Higlo Wins Reserve

The Reserve championship went to Ray S. Shoemaker, of Harrisburg, Pa., with his Higlo, ridden by Otis Dodson. Higlo, a well-built bay thoroughbred, has been a consistent winner all season for Owner Shoemaker and his present top form indicates that he will be an even more important factor in the future.

The races, which were partially responsible for the size of the crowd, closed the day's card. Most notable feature was the fact that Oldhop, a rangy chestnut owned by Gordon W. Wieneke, won two races during the afternoon, each at 5 furlongs. He appeared none the worse for his two strenuous outings, and scored his second victory in an hour to the tune of 3-1 odds.

The steeplechase, at 2½ miles, was won by North Hill Farm's Moon Hunter with Mrs. G. C. Everhart's Gold Sweeper placing second.

Gar Wood, Jr., Wins In Virginia Races

West Point, Va., July 4 (AP).—Red-headed Gar Wood, jr., and his two personal mechanics, Frank Vincent, of Tulsa, Okla., and Worth Boggeman, of Dallas, Tex., won 12 out of a possible 14 hydroplane races here today in West Point's annual outboard regatta to spreadeagle a field of the Nation's outstanding water speeders in the last of three regattas in Virginia.

Young Wood swept six straight races in Class A, B and C amateur and retired to the pits undefeated to watch his two mechanics end the afternoon of racing in a blaze of glory before 8,500 spectators.

Reds Split Doubleheader With Pirates

41,937 See Cincinnati Invade Pittsburgh, Win, 7-4, Then Lose, 4-3

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 4.—Pittsburgh and Cincinnati split their holiday double-header today before 41,937 fans, the season's largest crowd here, the league-leading Reds taking the first, 7 to 4, and the Pirates the second, 4 to 3.

Linus Frey and Southpaw Lee Grissom were heroes of the first contest. With the aid of a lone single and five bases on balls, four by Russ Bauers, Cincinnati scored four times in the first inning, only to have the Pirates drive Lloyd Moore and Ray Davis to the showers with two-run rallies in their part of the first and third frames.

Spaghetti Game Called in 79th With Score 77-68

Chicago, July 4 (INS).—A Fourth of July softball game ran 79 innings today before the players ran out of spaghetti, an accompaniment of the marathon contest. At the time the score was Gunga Dins, 77; Dixies, 68.

The game began at 5 o'clock this morning. Forty boys between 14 and 17 took part. They made two teams of 20 men each. They had intended playing 200 innings, but the quantity of spaghetti required had been miscauculated.

The idea was an inspiration of Playground Director John Mario, who said:

New Champ Crowned In Pikes Peak Run

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 4 (AP).—A new champion conquered rock-crested Pikes Peak today. Lou Wille, Colorado Springs runner, led the field to the summit in the second annual Pikes Peak "vertical mile" marathon.

Wille finished the 12-mile, 2,200-foot run in 2 hours 10 minutes 8.9 seconds. He beat the defending champion, Francis Darrah, of Boston, who came in second in 2 hours 18 minutes 0.8 seconds.

61,808 Watch Nats, Yankees Divide Pair

Lou Gehrig Honored At Yankee Stadium; Leonard Is Winner

First Yankee Run

The first hit allowed by Leonard evolved as the first Yankee run, and it sheared his lead to 2-1 in the second inning. Babe Dahlgren led off with a two-bagger to left, went to third on a sacrifice eand scored on Crosetti's grounder to Travis.

Leonard himself produced the run that proved his winning margin. It was in the fourth inning after Rick Ferrell had tripled into the leftfield corner. With one out and the Yanks' infield playing close, Leonard drilled a single over second base to score Ferrell.

The Nats threw up a brilliant defense around Leonard's pitching, and Myer and Travis started three double plays in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings that choked off Yankee attacks.

There was trouble for Leonard in the ninth with one out. George Selkirk lifted his fourteenth homer of the season into the rightfield bleachers to cut the Nats' lead to 2-1, and DiMaggio then drew a walk to put the tying run on base. But Bill Dickey forced DiMaggio at second and then Buddy Lewis sealed Leonard's triumph with a fancy stop on Keller's hard smash. Bob Prichard helping the play with a long-stretch catch of Lewis' slightly wild throw.

Nats Are In and Out

The Nats were in the second game only for two innings. After Buddy Lewis' wild throw on Crosetti's grounder was followed by George Selkirk's triple to the centerfield wall to bring the Yankees a run in the first inning, Taft Wright tied the score 1-1. He did it by belting Sundra's first pitch into the right-center field stands for his second homer of the year.

And then, in the next inning, the Nats fell out of the ball game, with the Yankees scoring five undeserved runs against Alex.

Steve Sundra started it with a single and after Alex fanned Crosetti, Sundra took second on a balk. Rolfe dropped a tainted double at Estalella's feet in leftfield to score Sundra. Selkirk grounded out, but DiMaggio beat out an infield hit to Travis to score Rolfe. Alex filled the bases at that point by walking Dickey and Keller, and then something awful happened.

What happened was that Joe Gordon lofted a short fly into rightfield and Rightfielder Taft Wright and Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth both pursued it with a single thought—the thought that the other fellow would make the catch. It dropped safely, and, presto, three more runs for the Yankees.

Nothing mattered much after that. Pete Appleton took the rest of the drubbing. He pitched three runs to the Yankees in the fourth inning, including Selkirk's fifteenth homer, and threw another pair of runs at the Yanks in the eighth and ninth. The Nats were shut out by Sundra in the last seven innings to make the game a complete mess for Washington.

Luray Loses Both Ends of Twin Ball

Luray, Va., July 4.—Front Royal All-Stars won a double-header baseball game from Luray East End Tigers here today by scores of 4 to 2, and 5 to 0.

Luray held Front Royal to a 2-0 score until the last half of the ninth in the first game when errors put Front Royal ahead.

Blaine Rideout Scores Upset In Track Meet

Cunningham, Fenske Among Those Beaten In Lincoln Event

the 5,000-meter run in 14 minutes 50.9 seconds, as against the old mark of 15:14.1, while Phil Fox, of San Francisco's Olympic Club, tossed the discus 172 feet 4½ inches for a new meet mark. The old record was 169 feet 8⅞ inches. In the 400-meter relay, the New York Athletic Club's "A" team turned in the time of 41 seconds, as against the old mark of 41.2.

Wolcott's surprising defeat in the 110 meters hurdles was matched by the defeat of Johnny Woodruff, Pittsburgh's Negro star, in the 400 meters dash. Woodruff was second by 4 yards and losing more ground as Erwin Miller, of Southern California's Athletic Association, the N. C. A. A. titleholder, hit the tape.

Ben Johnson, of New York, lost his 100-meter dash crown to Jeffrey Early in the afternoon and from then on the champs continued to "hit the canvas;" Mack Robinson, of Oregon, saw his 200 meters title go to Norwood Ewell, of Penn State; Charley Beetham, New York, took the 800 meters crown from Howard Borck; Mel Walker, of Columbus, Ohio, watched Les Steers, of San Francisco, win the high jump; Cornelius Warmerdam, of San Francisco, finished second to George Varoff, of San Francisco, in the pole vault; Lilburn Williams, of Xavier University, New Orleans, took the shot put crown away from Francis Ryan, of New York; Irving Folwartshny, of New York, lost his hammer title to Chester Cruikshank, of Delta, Colo.; Pete Zagar lost his discus title to Phil Fox, also of San Francisco Olympic Club, and Boyd Brown, of the same club, replaced Nick Vukmanic as the javelin champion.

Maryland Athletes Fail to Place

Lincoln, Nebr., July 4.—Halbert K. Evans of the University of Maryland, who finished third in the 200 meters hurdles event of the Junior A. A. U. track and field meet here yesterday, took third in the second heat of the 400 meters hurdles in the senior division of the two-day carnival today. His third did not qualify him to participate in the finals of the 400 meters hurdles.

Evans was beaten out in his heat by Robert Simmons of the University of Nebraska and Carl McBain of the University of California at Los Angeles. Simmons' time was 53.5 seconds. Roy V. Cochran of Indiana University won the finals in the event with a time of 51.9 seconds.

The only other University of Maryland entry in the meet was James H. Kehoe, who did not participate in the junior events yesterday but entered the 800 meters run in the senior division today. However, he did not place today. Winner of the event was Charles Beetham, representing the 69th Regiment, A. A. of New York. His time was 1 minute, 51.7 seconds.

Klein Tavern Bows

Prince George A. C. avenged its trimming by Heurich yesterday when it defeated Klein Tavern, winner of the National City League first half, 6 to 4, at MacGruder Park. Frank Conrad's three safeties held the visitors partly in check, though his 11 bases on balls had the winners worried at times. Prince George realized 10 hits off the hurling of Boyd Liggett.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnsom

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Dutch Leonard moves among the leaders in the Man of the Month contest on the basis of his performance at New York yesterday. Twenty points were distributed as follows:

To Leonard, six points, because in the first game he held the Yankees to six hits to protect his slender lead and score a 3-2 victory, and because he drove in one of the Nats' runs with one of his two hits of the game.

To Cecil Travis, five points, because in the first game he made a pair of hits and drove in a run, and because he made two of the Nats' six hits in the second game and fielded brilliantly all afternoon.

To Taft Wright, four points because in the second game he hit a home run that tied the score, in addition to driving in a run in the first game.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, two points, because he made one of the Nats' hits in the second game.

To Rick Ferrell, one point, because his first game triple led to a run.

To Bob Prichard, one point, because he fielded cleverly in both games of the double-header. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	6	Rick Ferrell	3
Dutch Leonard	6	Tony Giuliani	2
Cecil Travis	5	Joe Krakaukas	2
Johnny Welaj	4	Joe Haynes	2
Jim Bloodworth	4	Bob Prichard	2
Taft Wright	4	Bobby Estalella	1

Stock Prices Advance in Foreign Marts

Trading at Higher Level in London, Paris, Montreal

By the Associated Press.

London, July 4.—The Stock Market today developed a decidedly firmer trend, apparently influenced by rumors that the Anglo-French mutual assistance pact with Soviet Russia might finally be approaching consummation. Both gilt-edged securities and transatlantic stocks showed gains.

British war loan 3½s showed an improvement of ⅝ at 93¾. Oils were firm under leadership of Royal Dutch. Home industrials were quiet but firm, while continental support pushed gold mining shares forward.

Foreign exchange quotations were steady, but the London silver market clearly reflected uncertainty as to final clarification of the United States monetary policy and Treasury silver purchase plans. The flat spot price for bar silver slumped the equivalent of 0.66 of a cent at 37.66 cents an ounce.

Gains in Paris

Paris, July 4 (AP).—Optimism regarding the progress of negotiations at Moscow for an anti-agression pact spurred new buying on the Bourse today. Slight price gains were general.

French government bonds showed strength. The 4 per cent loan of 1925 was a leader with a gain of a point.

Bank stocks, electricals, metal and chemical shares were firm and international mining stocks were quoted slightly higher. Oil and rubber issues were steady.

Montreal Higher

Montreal, July 4 (AP).—Stock market prices kept on a forward jog late today and nearly all issues retained early gains. The improving trend extended from the opening bell to near the close. At the final hour papers loomed foremost in the rally. St. Lawrence Paper, preferred, jumped 2 points, Price Brothers 1 and St. Lawrence Corporation ¼. Next came the steel group, with National Steel Car up 2, Dosco ¾ and C. P. R. ⅛.

An influx of buying orders buoyed metals. Nickel held to an early improvement of ⅞ and Smelters, Hudson Bay Mining and Noranda posted advances of ¼ to ½. In utilities small increases appeared for Brazilian and Montreal Power. Oils produced gains as International Pete firmed ½ and Imperial Oil ¾. Other buyers' favorites were Canadian Celanese, Imperial Tobacco, National Breweries and Asbestos.

Silver futures closed easier today, 50 points off. No sales. Bid, July, 37.00.

Toronto Advances

Toronto, July 4 (AP).—Volume picked up moderately from Monday's slow tempo and prices advanced strongly on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Operating independently of the New York market, which was closed, the Toronto market posted average gains of a point to 1½ points in the mining and industrial sections, while Western oils were up moderately.

Retail Advertising Continues Gains

Chicago, July 4.—During the week ended June 24, volume of newspaper advertising placed by the retailers of 79 major American cities was 9.1 per cent greater than during the corresponding week of 1938. Advertising Age reported today.

During that week, newspapers in the reporting cities carried a total of 17,405,973 lines of retail display advertising, compared with 15,948,664 lines in the corresponding week of last year. For the year to date, at total of 468,288,663 lines of retail newspaper display has appeared in these cities, compared with 462,182,525 lines last year, for a gain of 1.3 per cent.

Daily Oil Output Drops 3,371 Barrels

Tulsa, July 4 (AP).—Daily average oil production of the United States declined 3,371 to 3,460,000 barrels for the week ended July 1, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Barrelage dropped 6,800 to 461,950 in Oklahoma; 14,656 to 594,100 in California; 400 in eastern fields to 96,000, and 3,180 to 77,300 in the Rocky Mountain area.

Flow increased in east Texas 50 to 372,798 barrels daily; Texas as a whole, 3,302 to 1,312,141; Louisana, 1,155, to 271,240; Kansas, 1,075 to 169,100; Illinois 11,629 to 244,065, and Michigan, 2,013 to 68,591.

Rukeyser Says: Corporations Berate Loss In Price Cuts

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Economic Commentator

New York, July 4.—While politicians at Washington before the temporary national economic committee and elsewhere have expressed concern over the alleged holding up of prices by "monopolistic" business, corporation officials in two basic industries have recently dramatically directed popular attention to the ruinous downward course of basic prices.

With conspicuously few exceptions, the corporate accounts do not reveal that the "monopolistic" profits about which the politicians admonished had been realized.

A chief executive of an "independent" steel company berated management for its folly in taking orders chronically at a loss. "Not until they (the managers) remember that they are in business to make a profit," the executive warned, "will their financial statements be written in black instead of red." Such logic is indisputable and the case should not be confused by gossip that the independents are concerned with the new efficiency built into the brand-new plants by the leading corporations.

Appeal to Public

Another independent in another industry, the oil industry, following the recommendation of this column to use advertising to "sell the business as well as the product," took the case of ruinous price-cutting before the public. He announced that his company would increase its prices for tank-wagon deliveries of all grades of gasoline ½ cent a gallon throughout the 42 States in which it operates.

Pointing out that current prices did not permit the industry to recoup its costs and stay in business, he added: "We believe the public is willing to pay a fair price for gasoline and other petroleum products in order that the industry may continue to employ the 1,000,000 people on its pay rolls, pay a fair return on the capital invested in the industry, carry a tax burden of more than $1,250,000,000 annually and supply the consumer with the best fuels and lubricants at reasonable prices."

A serious and basic issue has been raised. No sense in belittling it by asking whether the advocate is himself a relatively high-cost producer. It is a question whether businessmen can talk prices up. Evidently they feel that in economic war, as in real war, battles are won in part through "propaganda" efforts.

The oil "fair price" plea attracted an enormously favorable response from other businessmen. But they are in the same boat facing similar problems. Such efforts may help to give them more backbone in setting "just" prices.

But the fight must be carried to consumers, whose daily plebiscite at the service stations determines what prices shall prevail. Many are in a mood to buy at prices which will assure prosperity and continuance of the American way.

Gasoline Firmer

Except in the territory on the eastern seaboard from New Jersey to South Carolina and in the State of Ohio, there was a widespread tendency to firm up gasoline prices. The sponsor estimates that the advance has been maintained in 65 per cent of the marketing area. In other places, prices quickly fell back. The present price trend is highly irregular and spotty.

In analyzing the formal approval by other businessmen of the gesture for higher prices, one hard-boiled executive said, "The answer, as I see it, is a matter of establishing and maintaining some sort of reasonable relationship between production and consumption. It is only then that fair prices can be maintained, for if people go on with production regardless of consumption, and pile up stocks of ever-increasing weight, then there must inevitably come a time when these stocks are liquidated. That is commonly done in two ways. The first seems the easier, and that is price cutting.

But that also becomes ineffective unless it succeeds in stimulating consumption measurably beyond the consumption that prevailed while surplus stocks were accumulating. It seldom succeeds in doing this because when price-cutting starts, everybody joins in, and the reduction in price, important as it is to the producer, is seldom of sufficient consequence to the consumer to cause him to materially increase the total of his consumption."

The main job of business management is to convert the so-called profit system into a profitable system.

Wheat Edges A Bit Higher At Winnipeg

But Quotations at Liverpool Are Slightly Lower

By the Associated Press.

Winnipeg, July 4.—Little change was registered by wheat futures prices on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as buyers and sellers remained on the sidelines throughout most of the session. Final quotations were unchanged to ¼ cent higher, with July at 58⅞ bid, October 60; November 61¾ bid, and December 61¾ cents. Export business in Canadian wheat was difficult to trace, but was believed to have reached nearly 400,000 bushels.

Liverpool closed ¾d down under pressure of Manitoba and Argentine offers and lack of any important mill demand for actual wheat. The Independence Day holiday in the United States kept Southern markets closed and also prevented relay through New York of Buenos Aires quotations.

Exporters and shippers were credited with active buying of Nos. 1 and 2 Northern grades in the cash wheat market. Coarse grains uncovered some export support in oats and barley. Yesterday's country marketings totaled 302,000 bushels, compared with 234,000 for tse same day a year ago.

B. & O. Carloadings Register Increases

Baltimore, July 4.—Baltimore & Ohio carloadings for June totaled 182,586, an increase of 16,148 loads over May. June carloadings also showed an increase of 29,654 over June last year.

Carloadings for the week ended July 1, showed a total of 44,053, an increase of 7,150 over the corresponding week of last year. Last week's total also was 1,946 loads over the previous week of this year.

Brown Bros. Harriman Assets $105,644,031

New York, July 4.—The financial statement of Brown Brothers Harriman & Co., private bankers, as of June 30, shows an increase in total assets to $105,644,031 compared with $102,222,409 on March 31 and $78,800,458 a year ago.

Deposits increased to $79,200,988 against $75,134,895 on March 31 and $53,368,747 on June 30, 1938; while capital and surplus increased to $13,165,272 compared with $13,145,225 three months ago and $13,054,960 a year ago.

Eastern Air Traffic 53% Above Year Ago

New York, July 4 (AP).—Approximately 19,000 revenue passengers, representing an increase of 53 per cent over June of last year, were carried last month by Eastern air Lines, President E. V. Rickenbacker said today.

July 4 holiday traffic has increased about 35 per cent, he added, with New York bookings gaining by 64 per cent over the same weekend of a year ago.

In Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

HOLD EVERYTHING! Date for Rainbow Room's big "Birthday Party" has been set definitely for Wednesday, July 19. Put a big red circle around the date. We can't figure whether the fiesta should mark Rainbow's first or fourth anniversary. The spot was launched four years ago. But last year the Rainbow Room was doubled in size, all dressed up with real rainbows.

NIGHT AND DAY: 1 p. m. Bamboo Gardens. "Slave Dance" with La Vesse brandishing a bull whip over poor little Margo who's chained like a Georgia convict. The Vannettes looking like strawberry sundaes in pink frocks, bonnets and parasols all trimmed with silver-edged ruffles. Marian Dawn sings "Wishing."

4:30 p. m., Mayfair. Promotion Manager Jimmy Byrd equally happy over the new Art Barker Trio and the Mayfair softball team's victory over the Daily News to the tune of 19-9. "And they called us sissies because we wouldn't play in a cloudburst," exults Jimmy. Art Barker sings "Wishing."

5:15 p. m. Neptune Room. Manager Dot O'Connell looking like a bluebird in azure linen. Lady Anez looks at our right and left palms. It seems that the right hand shows what the left would like to do. She tells us some very amusing things due to come true, we hope.

6 p. m. Hi Hat. Chat with Bill Holt, leader of the Aloha Serenaders. Life owes him nothing. He sailed around Cape Horn in a square-rigger when he was 15, was on the S. S. Missouri, first ship to pass through the Panama Canal, fought in the World War. American, Tahitian, Hawaiian and English blood is in his veins. One of his grandmothers was a Hawaiian princess.

6:45 p. m. Rainbow Room. See first paragraph.

7:30 p. m., "Temptation" dance (looked very authentic) by Mildred Zuger in a completely stunning gown of gunmetal lame touched up with narrow white pleatings. The Six Graces very mischievous and gay in the "Merry Widow" waltz. Buddy Shaner emcees handsomely. He sings "Wishing," too.

9 p. m. Glen Echo. Little Joe Hart bounding around like one demented in a two-off of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." And no wonder. For when he landed in Echo, Col. Leonard Schloss greeted him by tossing a couple of torpedoes at him—literally. Just a friendly Fourth of July gesture.

10:00. Shoreham Terrace. A skating constellation under the full moon. A thousand folks holding their breath while the Reynolds skating beauties spun with a fury that seemed likely to result in broken bones at any second. . . . M. Jacques Truelle, counselor of the French Embassy, and guests enjoying a dinner that had involved deep conference between M. Truelle and Chef Haeringer. Barnee plays "Wishing."

10:30. Roger Smith Roof Garden. Arrive just in time to get hooked as a judge in the "Talent Contest." The gifted Myrah studies our palm with the aid of a flashlight; tells us that we're going travelling. Hope it's to the World's Fair. Contest starts. Dorothy Van sings "Wishing." She gets the prize.

Tudell and Jean, dancing in the Continental manner at the Lotus 11:45. Lounge Riviera. Just miss the "Champagne Interlude," darn it! But the champagne was won by pretty Mrs. John A. Hornburg, formerly of Bermuda, now of Alexandria. We're told that Mr. Hornburg applauded her heartily. There's a husband for you . . . Pete Macias denies and denies that he'll be the maestro at Mrs. Evelyn McLean's new night spot this fall. But we wouldn't bet on it.

ODDMENTS: Every lad in the Penguins' orchestra (Metronome Room) has his name on the front of his music stand. (Aside to Chet de Chartain. Why not the telephone numbers?) . . . That old "Chopsticks" number seems of 1939 vintage as done by Evelyn Knight and Arthur Todd in the King Cole Room . . . Owner Helen Hamilton, of the Troika, is in town for a flying visit. She went out to Maryland Gardens, of course, since most of Troika's bandsmen are now playing there . . . They say that many of the members of that "Three Hours for Lunch Club" in the Mayflower stay right on for the cocktail hour . . . It takes seven hired men, a manager and his wife, to raise all those vegetables that are served garden-fresh at O'Donnell's Farms.

Bartenders' Union To Hold Poll Sunday

Bartenders Local Union No. 75 will vote next Sunday on changes in its by-laws, involving out-of-work stamps and suspension of members in arrears on death assessments, Charls E. Sands, executive secretary, announced yesterday. Polls will be set up at 608 Ninth street northwest.

SOLID

First Lady Gets Rebuke From Legion Chief

Chadwick Assails Her Praise of 'Communist' Youth Congress

By the United Press.

Boston, July 4.—National Commander Stephen F. Chadwick of the American Legion tonight rebuked Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for her indorsement of the American Youth Congress which he charged was "communist-controlled."

He declared he was "disappointingly disturbed" by Mrs. Roosevelt's public praise of the organization yesterday in New York after anti-communist delegates walked from the meeting in protest of the congress' rejection of a proposed plank in its creed which would condemn Communism and other "isms."

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday described herself as "very proud" of the creed adopted and added that "nothing finer has come out of any organization."

(The creed adopted yesterday pledged members of the Congress to uphold "the democratic way" and to oppose "all undemocratic tendencies and all forms of dictatorship.")

"Fellow Travelers"

Contending that "while some members are not avowed Communists they are at least 'fellow-travelers,'" Chadwick said:

"I have observed the expected failure of the so-called American Youth Congress to condemn communism and other 'isms' which would destroy us as a free people."

(A resolution adopted unanimously today denounces "all forms of dictatorship, whether they be Communist, Fascist, Nazi, or any other type.)

"The American Youth Congress has been publicized for a period of years as one of the Communist Front organizations . . . It is not a Congress of the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Sons of Legion members or other patriotic groups . . . But it is a group of 'free thinkers,'" Chadwick asserted.

Closes Row

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 4.—The American Youth Congress today closed the controversy over its attitude toward communism by unanimously adopting a resolution specifically condemning Communist, Fascist and Nazi dictatorships, but maintaining freedom of speech and expression for young people of all races, religious and political parties.

The delegates also passed a resolution calling for the establishment of a permanent Federal loan fund, with an appropriation of up to $500,000,000, to aid youth and promote national economic recovery.

A poll, taken on voting machines, revealed an overwhelming preference for a third term for President Roosevelt.

No Votes for Taft

On a question asking their favorite Presidential candidate for 1940 the Congress members gave Mr. Roosevelt 904 votes. Mayor LaGuardia, the second choice, polled only 58. Thomas E. Dewey was a close third with 56. Other scores were: Senator Vandenberg, 24; Secretary Hull, 18, and Vice President Garner, 4. Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, who had a place on the machine, ended up with a total of exactly no votes.

On the question of what they would do in case of war, 124 delegates said they would refuse to fight, while 464 said they would volunteer if invasion threatened.

As its chairman for the coming year the congress elected Jack MacMichael, of Atlanta, chairman of the National Intercollegiate Christian Council. James B. Carey, youthful secretary of the C. I. O., was withdrawn as a candidate before the voting.

Walk-out Threatened

On Monday the congress had adopted an official creed assailing dictatorship in any form, but the delegates emphatically rejected an amendment which would have added a denunciation of Communism, Fascism and Nazism.

The supporters of the amendment had threatened to bolt the congress if their measure should be turned down, and about 15 members of the group did walk out after the vote.

Gil Green, speaking for the Young Communist League, said in part:

"When we voted against all dictatorships yesterday we meant just that. We made no mental reservations about dictatorships organized by Communists. We believe that Communism should not stand for dictatorships, but for democracy. We feel that this resolution is not sufficiently clear—that it might well have specified Coughlinism and anti-Semitism also. Nevertheless, we will support the measure."

Czech Decalogue Of Resistance Published in U.S.

New York, July 4 (AP).—George J. Janecek, commissioner of the Czecho-Slovak pavilion at the New York World's Fair, made public today a decalogue of resistance which he said was being widely circulated through underground methods in that country.

Among the admonitions:

"Do not believe that we have lived for 1,000 years in a German Reich but know from our history that this is a lie.

"Do not believe what you read in the Czech newspapers or hear on the radio because news and radio offices are under German control.

"Do not believe that we stand alone in the world.

"Treat the Germans in such a way that they should always feel that they are foreigners, in the service of injustice and brutality."

Kensington Loses 15-13 Ball Game to Drugmen

The tie between Kensington and Colesville for top position in Montgomery County League standings was broken yesterday when Kensington lost an eight-run lead and a 15-13 decision to Market Pharmacy. The winners had only two extra-base hits, a double by Valenza and a triple by Zanelloti, compared to four doubles and a home run for Kensington.

July 4 Crowds Set Attendance Marks At Major Games

By the Associated Press

New York, July 4.—Two attendance records fell as the major league clubs played the Fourth of July double-headers today.

A total of 249,541 saw the games—with the crowd of 61,808 at the Yankee Stadium for Lou Gehrig Day setting a season's attendance record and the throng of 56,272 at Detroit shattering all marks for the Motor City.

The attendance figures for the eight parks follow:

American League		National League

Georgetown Nine Blanks Camden

The Georgetown Athletics, members of the Colored Inter-City Baseball League, continued their winning ways over all opponents yesterday with a shutout victory over Camden Tavern, 9 to 0, at Green Valley, Va. Frazier went the route for the winners, allowing but three hits and no walks.

A run in each of the first two innings put the A's in an early lead and they added three in the fifth, one in the sixth and three more in the seventh. Rain caused the calling of the game after that. McKeever gave the winners eight hits and a pair of free passes.

Embryo Flier Held After Plane Joy-Ride

Springfield, Ill., July 4 (AP).—A student flier baffled the police today with his Fourth of July joy ride—but not for long.

H. S. Darr, manager of the Curtiss-Reynolds Airport near Chicago, reported a single-motored cabin monoplane was stolen at noon by a flier who took 50 minutes of dual instruction, but was refused permission to rent it for flying alone.

The police, who, with their radio, motorcycle and squad cars have an effective trap for automobile thives, felt rather helpless, but presently Lieut. Raymond May, of the State police, announced Fred Hoffman, 40, of La Grange Park, had been seized here as the absconding aviator after a flight of some 180 miles from Chicago. Hoffman was charged with larceny.

Honey Fitz Pines For Sweet Adeline As World's Theme

Hyannis, Mass., July 4 (AP).—John F. Fitzgerald, the famed "Honey Fitz" of Boston, whose singing of "Sweet Adeline" has won applause from country dances to the floor of the United States House of Representatives, stepped forward tonight as the Number 1 plugger of the barber shop classic for the world's theme song.

Told of the idea of Walter Blaufuss, Chicago song writer, that "Sweet Adeline" ought to be a world anthem, the 76-year-old former mayor of Boston said:

"Will you tell them that if they want to send me as America's agent to Europe, I'll sing it in German, French, English and Italian."

Fitzgerald is the father-in-law of Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain.

U. S. Urged To Keep Firm Hand in Orient

Philippine Legion Raps Proposed Withdrawal From the Islands

Manila, July 4 (AP).—The Philippine Department of the American Legion adopted a resolution today urging that the United States hold and defend all its Pacific possessions to "maintain a firm hand in Oriental diplomacy and as a stabilizing influence in international relations."

The resolutions said the United States "should insist upon her treaty rights in the Orient and non-interference with her trade and commerce throughout the Far East."

Withdrawal of American sovereignty from the islands, acquired through conquest and purchase, the resolution said, would "reduce to practical nullity the moral influence of the United States in the Orient; abandon to others a large part of the participation of the United States in Far Eastern trade; and cause a serious decline in power and prestige of the United States in international affairs."

Acting High Commissioner J. Weldon Jones, commander of the Philippine Department, ordered the resolution forwarded to the National Legion Convention in Chicago.

The department approved another resolution decrying the "tendency on the part of large sections of the American people to be guided by fear of foreign repercussions and retaliations in the development of our purely domestic policies."

It referred to Congressional rejection of the Guam Harbor improvement appropriation after threats of reprisals had been heard through the Japanese press.

The resolution said rejection of the Guam item was "contrary to the best American traditions and renders our country more to the dangers that Congress by its action sought to avoid."

Mrs. R. E. Edwards Dies at 79 After Fall Breaks Hip

Mrs. Rufus Eugene Edwards, 79, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lawrence D. Groner, 2600 Thirty-first street northwest. She had been ill three months, since breaking her hip in a fall on the floor.

Chief Justice Groner, of the District Court of Appeals, her son-in-law, said Mrs. Edwards would be buried in the Edwards family plot in Mount Washington Cemetery, Kansas City.

Mrs. Edwards lived here eight years, since the death of her husband, who was a prominent rancher. Besides her daughter, two granddaughters, Elizabeth and Marian Shouse, daughters of Mrs. Groner by a previous marriage, survive.

Mrs. Ida Battle Dies; District Club Woman

Brief Illness Fatal To Physician's Wife, Former MissPolkinhorn

Mrs. Ida Polkinhorn Battle, 68, wife of Dr. Lewis J. Battle, of 1401 Kennedy street northwest, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital after a brief illness.

She was the daughter of Richard O and Hannah M. Polkinhorn, and her family had for three generations been natives of Washington. Her father had established a printing firm on D street in 1850, and numberd among his patrons President Garfield, James G. Blaine and W. W. Corcoran.

Mrs. Battle was educated at Mrs. Laura Osborn's Seminary, and for many years was active in the Sixth Presbyterian Church, where she was on the committee of 12 of the Presbyterian Home Board. She was past treasurer and historian of the Women's Auxiliary of the District of Columbia Medical Society, past vice president and pianist of the Society of Natives, and a member of the Political Study Club, the Women's National Democratic Club, the Humane Society, the Women's Club of Sixteenth Street Highlands, and the Daughters of 1812.

Besides her husband she leaves two daughters, Mrs. Mary B. Bowman and Mrs. Robert E. Harvey; a son, Richard P. Battle, and a granddaughter, Mary Ida Bowman. Arrangements for funeral services at the home have not yet been completed.

Gov. Olson Raps Despotism, Pleads For Tolerance

San Francisco, July 4 (AP).—Sharp criticism of the "financial and industrial despotism" which he said was blocking attempts to achieve "a more intelligent economic order" was made by Gov. Culbert L. Olson of California today in a national Independence Day address pleading for tolerance.

Sharing time on a national radio broadcast with Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York and Editor William Allen White, of Emporia, Kans., Gov. Olson read the "American declaration of tolerance and equality."

He criticized the "despotism" he said opposed the desire of leaders who wish to "provide general employment and a . . . more equitable distribution of our national income."

"A strategy of that opposition," he said, "is to make use of demagoguery for spreading propaganda, stirring up religious and racial intolerance, misunderstandings and divisions."

British Monarchs To Visit Belgium

London, July 4 (AP).—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, recently returned from Canada and the United States, announced today they had accepted an invitation to visit Belgium from October 24 to 27.

The visit will be in return for one paid by Belgian King Leopold to London in November, 1937.

Retailers to Fight N.Y. Cigarette Tax

New York, July 4.—Representatives of the retail tobacco trade here indicated today they are preparing to wage a determined fight against the new State tax of 2 cents a package on cigarettes, in addition to the 1-cent tax previously imposed by the city.

Aside from the falling off in sales, retail spokesmen said the increasing flow of bootleg cigarettes from New Jersey threatens to leave the New York merchant "holding the bag."

Pontoon Is Sunk Close to Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., July 4 (AP).—Working at high speed despite the holiday, Navy salvage men lowered a huge pontoon within 40 feet of the submarine Squalus today and completed an important step in their efforts to put a five-ton chain under the submersible.

Officials said they probably would get the second pontoon under water during the night. The Navy plans to hook seven pontoons to the Squalus and tow the submarine shoreward in easy stages.

Fire Threatens Sequoia Trees

Visalia, Calif., July 4 (INS).—Fire tonight was eating its way toward the great stand of redwoods in Sequoia National Park. The blaze had penetrated the National Park boundaries at a half-dozen points.

The Forest Service reported failure to bring the flames under control by tomorrow would mean a serious threat to the great trees.

Navy Pilot Flies Glider to 16,300 Ft.

Elmira, N. Y., July 4 (U.P.).—Lieut. Robert M. Stanley, U. S. N., established a new altitude record for motorless planes today after climbing 16,300 feet above his take-off point.

Stanley, who set the previous record of 13,400 feet last week, climbed to 18,054 feet above sea level or 16,300 feet above his take-off point.

Photographer Dies In 45-Foot Fall

Lexington, Ky., July 4 (AP).—Anton F. Bauman, 38, a New York City photographer, was killed today in a fall from a 45-foot water tower from which he was taking color pictures at the Idle Hour Farm of Col. E. R. Bradley. Bauman, an employe of the E. Leitz Co. of New York, was taking pictures for Life Magazine.

"West was trying to keep the bidding low so the opponents could enjoy themselves. If he insists on opening the bidding with a hand like this he should have courage enough to bid a spade."

West proves more imaginative in the play than he did in the bidding. He leads the king of spades, but declarer, with the guarded jack in his own hand, ducks in dummy, performing the Bath Coup. West realizes the spade situation and, counting his tricks discovers that he has a good chance of defeating the contract if East has the king of hearts or clubs. He therefore plays the ace and then the queen of diamonds, killing the jack-ten in dummy and providing for a tenace of the nine-seven of diamonds over declarer's eight-six. Declarer, however, finds a way to foil this plan. He uses a counter-strategy to insure the taking of nine tricks. Can you see what it is? Play out the hand yourself before reading how South managed to win his contract.

By the simple expedient of ducking the diamond queen and letting West hold the trick with it, South safeguarded his contract from further attack. West, stuck with the lead, had to play a card favorable to declarer. East was exhausted in diamonds and even upon winning the club king could not return the suit to West. Thus clever defense was frustrated. "But," remarks our contributor, "had West bid spades it would be almost impossible for South to bid the no trump." With North playing the contract, a spade lead from East, through dummy's jack, would kill the hand.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Suppose the Washington Monument were 45 feet higher than it is. Suppose that all around its base were a circular colonnade in which stood statues of famous Americans. Suppose the shaft, itself, were made entirely of marble.

Then you'd have some idea of what Robert Mills, who designed the Monument, intended it should look like.

Mills was the first architect in charge of Federal buildings, and tomorrow evening, when the Supervising Architect's office marks its transfer from the Treasury Department to the Public Works Agency at a banquet at the Willard, his name will be pointed to with pride. The office, begun on July 6, 1836, is said to be the oldest architect's office in the world; at least no other existing today has had so long and continuous a career.

Mills also designed the Treasury Building itself and the Washington Monument in Baltimore. But possibly one of his most unusual claims to fame is the fact that in a competition against Charles Bulfinch, another architect, he won the award for improving the acoustics in the Hall of Representatives at the Capitol.

Which may mean that many a roaring, filibustering Congressman might have won an important debate just because Architect Mills was an ingenious fellow.

The Government's first public works expert was interested in other things than public buildings. In 1825 he suggested that a railroad be built between Washington and New Orleans. "With such a railroad," said Mills, hammering on the table, "the trip can be made in four days, not in 26." His argument was good but it fell on deaf ears . . . probably because he neglected to develop a set of good acoustics for himself.

When 1852 rolled around the idea of having a Government architect had turned out to be so successful that after a little legislative pulling and yanking, the position was made permanent, with Ammi B. Young carrying the full title of supervising architect.

Long before 1852 Mills had employed Young to design the Boston Custom House. It was a nice commission and Young, enthusiastic about the appointment, asked if he might be sent on an official trip to London first to study the entire subject of custom houses inside and out.

Mills fixed his protege with a very stern eye. "I can hardly approve," he said, "of the Government's paying a man for his knowledge and then incurring the expense of sending him abroad to obtain that knowledge."

Since the incumbency of Ammi B. Young, 14 men have held the position of supervising architect. The present "chief draftsman" is Louis A. Simon.

One of the longest tenures of office was that of James A. Wetmore, who served from 1915 to 1934. During that period his name appeared on the cornerstone of every public building erected. The result is that he is generally credited with having his name carved on more buildings than any other person in history.

The country doesn't "get the count" until 1940, but forms to be filled out for information concerning industry for the sixteenth census are already in order.

Quite a few extra questions were suggested for the blanks but the Census Bureau, which has to sweep up all the crumbs and report on them in three years, turned them down. Three years just wouldn't be long enough.

The next time a billboard obscures your view think nothing of it. Out in Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado, the Government picked up an entire mountain village and tossed it out of a meadow in order to improve the landscape. The village consisted of about 30 old log cabins and a main street.

All this comes out in a report made by Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, to Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Cammerer's boys have been cleaning up and clearing off Government land all the way from Fall River in the northern part of the park to Long's Peak in the south. This is one time when civilization is saying to the wilderness, "Spread yourself." Wrecking crews rolled over several large hotels in Horseshoe Park and Beaver Meadows, and even fences were pulled up by the roots.

More than 85 Agriculture employes have registered for swimming-hole courses at the Shoreham for this summer. There will be two classes under the direction of Dudley Gordon—beginners and advanced. Gordon has already got plans in his head to develop that advanced corps into a team to meet all comers. All you have to pay is $1 and you can splash all the way through the rest of the summer until Labor Day.

Singing for their supper is what Agriculture Department cafeteria employes seem to be doing these days. Originally only about 18 were warbling for their menus as members of the group's glee club. Now there are between 50 and 60 who are chasing high C's.

The Civil Service Commission has announced a Nation-wide open competitive examination for position as junior bank examiners on the staff of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Closing date for applications in the East is July 24. For those living west of the Rocky Mountains there are three days' grace, with the bars falling on July 27.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XXIX

THE FAWN TOOK UP much of Jody's time. It tagged him wherever he went. At the woodpile, it interfered with the swing of his ax. The milking had been assigned to him. He was forced to bar the fawn from the lot and it stood by the gate, peering between the bars, and bleated until he had finished. He stripped Trixie's teats until she kicked in protest. Each cupful of milk meant more nourishment for the fawn. It seemed to him that he could see it growing. It stood firm on its small legs and leaped and tossed its head and tail. He romped with it until they dropped together in a heap to rest and cool themselves.

M. K. Rawlings

The days were hot and humid. Penny sweat in his bed. Buck came dripping from the fields. He discarded his shirt and worked naked to the waist. His chest was thick with black hair. The perspiration glistened on it like raindrops on black dried moss. When she was sure he would not call for it, Ma Baxter washed and boiled the shirt and hung it in the scalding sunshine.

Buck filled the Baxter cabin until it bulged.

Ma Baxter said to Penny, "First sight I catch o' that beard and chest in the mornin's, I take a start, for I think a bear's got in the house."

She was appalled at the amount of food he bolted three times a day. She could scarcely complain, since he more than made it up with the work he was doing and the game with which he supplied her. In the week he had been at the clearing, he had worked out the corn, the cow-peas and the sweet potatoes. He had cleared two acres of new ground to the west, between the peafield and the sinkhole. He had cut down a dozen oaks and pines and sweet gums and innumerable saplings, burned the stumps and trimmed the fallen trees, so that Jody and Penny on the cross-cut saw might cut the limbs and trunks for firewood.

He said, "You plant Sea Island cotton on that new ground, come spring, and you'll make you a crop."

MA BAXTER SAID suspiciously, "You-all has got no cotton."

He said easily, "Us Forresters ain't farmers. We'll do the clarin', we'll plow a field now and agin, but it's our nature to make a livin' what I reckon you'd call rough and easy."

She said primly, "Rough ways lands folks in trouble."

He said, "You ever know my granddaddy? They called him Trouble Forrester."

She could not dislike him. He was as good-natured as a dog. She could only say to Penny in the privacy of night, "He works like a ox, but he's so tormented black. Ezra, he's black as a buzzard."

"Hit's his beard." Penny said. "Did I have a black beard like that un, I mought not look like no buzzard, but I'd shore look like a crow."

Penny's strength was slow in returning. The swelling from the poisoning had gone down. The skin was sloughing away where the rattler had struck him and he had cut the wounds to make the envenomed blood flow more freely. But at the least exertion, he was nauseated, and his heart pumped like the paddle-wheels on the river steamers, and he gasped for breath and must lie flat to recover himself. He was all wiry nerves, strung like harp-strings on a frail wooden body.

To Jody, the presence of Buck was a stimulation so great that he was feverish with it. The fawn alone would have had him delirious. The two together kept him in a daze, wandering from Penny's room to wherever Buck was working, to wherever the fawn might be, and around again.

His mother said, "You'd ought to be noticin' all what Buck is doin', so you kin do it when he's gone."

There was a tacit understanding among the three of them that Penny was to be spared.

The morning of the eighth day that Buck had been at the clearing, he called Jody to the cornfield. Vandals had visited it during the night. Half a row of corn had been stripped of its ears. Midway of the row lay a pile of corn-husks.

Buck said, "You know what done that?"

"'Coons?"

"Hell, no. Foxes. Foxes love corn gooder'n I do. Two-three o' them bushy-tailed scapers come in last night and had them a pure picnic."

Jody laughed out.

"A fox picnic! I'd love to of seed it."

Buck said sternly, "You'd ought to be out at night with your gun, keepin' 'em out. Now we'll git 'em tonight. You got to learn to be serious. And this evenin' we'll rob that bee-tree by the sink-hole, and that'll learn you how to do that."

JODY WENT THROUGH the day impatiently. A hunt with Buck had a different quality from a hunt with his father. There was an excitement in anything the Forresters did that made him nervous and high-keyed. There was noise and confusion. A hunt with Penny held a satisfaction that was of more than the chase. There was always time to see a bird fly over, or to listen to a 'gator, bellowing in the swamp. He wished that Penny were able to be about, to rob the bee-tree with them; to go on the trail of the robber foxes. In midafternoon Buck came from the new ground. Penny was sleeping.

Buck said to Ma Baxter, "I'll want a lard-pail and a axe and a heap o' rags to burn for smudges."

There were not many rags in the Baxter household. Clothes were worn and patched and mended until they dropped in ribbons. Flour sacks went into aprons and dish-towels and chair-backs that she embroidered on winter evenings; into backs for her patch-work quilts. Buck looked disgustedly at the small handful she gave him.

He said, "Well, reckon we kin use moss."

She said, "Don't you-all git stung, now. My grandpappy got hisself stung oncet to where he was in the bed a fortnight."

"If we git stung, hit shore won't be o' purpose."

He started across the yard with Jody beside him. The fawn was close behind.

"You want your blasted baby to get stung to death? Then shut him up."

Jody led the fawn reluctantly to the shed and closed the door. He hated to be separated from it, even for honey-hunting. It seemed unjust that Penny should not be along. He had had his eye on the bee-tree all spring. He had waited for the proper time, when the bees should have gathered their nectar from the yellow jessamine, from the mulberry and the holly, the palmetto bloom and the chinaberry, the wild grapes and the peaches, and from the hawthorn and the wild plum. There would still be bloom from which they might make their own winter store. The red bay and the loblolly were in full blossom. There would soon be sumac and goldenrod and asters.

Buck said, "You know who'd purely love to be gettin' honey with us? Fodder-wing. He'll work amongst the bees so quiet, you'd figger they was makin' him a present o' the honey-comb."

They reached the sink-hole.

Buck said, "I don't see how you-all have made out, totin' your water so fur. If I wasn't about to be leavin', I'd shore he'p you dig a well nigh to the house."

"You fixin' to leave?"

"Well, yes. Im fretted about Fodder-wing. And I ain't never lived this long without whiskey."

The bee-tree was in a dead pine. Midway up its height, the wild honey-bees flew in and out of a deep cavity. It stood at the north edge of the sink-hole. Buck stopped by the live oaks to pull down armfuls of green Spanish moss. At the base of the pine he pointed to a pile of dried grass and feathers.

"The wood-ducks tried to nest there," he said. "They'll see a hole in a tree, and don't matter do it belong to a Lord God woodpecker, or one o' them big woodpeckers with a ivory bill, or a swarm o' bees, they'll take a notion to it and they'll try to nest in the hole. The bees has done drove these uns out."

HE BEGUN TO CHOP at the base of the dead pine. High in the air a humming sounded like a den of rattlers, far distant and turbulent. The blows of the ax echoed back and forth across the sink-hole. Squirrels, quiescent in the oaks and palm trees, began to chatter at the disturbance. Scrub jays cried shrilly. The pine shook. The humming grew into a roar. The bees sung across their heads like small shot.

Buck called, "Light me a smudge, boy. Be peert."

Jody made a loose ball of moss and rags and opened Buck's tinder horn. He struggled with flint and steel. Penny was so expert at starting a fire that it occurred to Jody in a panic that he had never done it himself. The sparks flashed to the scorched rags that constituted the tinder, but he blew them so violently that they flickered out almost as soon as they touched the cloth. Buck dropped the ax and ran to him and took the materials from him. He rubbed flint and steel together as vigorously as Jody had done, but he blew on the spark-touched rags with a judiciousness amazing in a Forrester. The rags blazed and he touched the fire to the moss. It began to smoke without blazing.

Buck ran back to the pine and put his muscles behind the ax. Its bright blade ate into the decayed center of the tree. Its long fibers split and ripped and shivered. The pine roared in the air as though a voice had come to it to cry out with in its falling. It crashed to earth and the bees were a cloud across its dead gaping heart. Buck snatched up the smudge and darted in as quick, for all his size, as a weasel. He stufffed the smoking ball into the cavity with one thrust and ran madly. He looked more than ever like a lumbering bear. He let out a howl and slapped at his chest and shoulders. Jody had to laugh at him. Then a needle-point of fire stabbed his own neck.

Buck shouted, "Git down the sink-hole! Git to the water!"

They scrambled down the steep bank. The seepage pool at the bottom was shallow for lack of rains. The water did not quite cover them when they lay in it. Buck scooped up handfuls of mud and plastered Jody's hair and neck with it. His own thatch was a thick enough protection. A few bees followed and swung back and forth persistently. After a time Buck raised himself cautiously.

He said, "They're due to be quiet now. But ain't we a pair o' hogs."

Their breeches, their face, their shirts, were caked with mud. It was not yet wash-day and Jody led the way up the south wall of the sink-hole to the wash-troughs. They sousled their clothes in one and washed themselves from the other.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

YOU SAY, OLD TIMER, THE CURSE OF CORTEZ MAKES THAT RING UNLUCKY FOR BRIDEGROOMS?
VERY UNLUCKY! YOU SEE
"LONG AGO, WHEN THE CONQUERORS INVADED THIS LAND, A SOLDIER OF CORTEZ PLUCKED THE EYE FROM AN AZTEC GOD"
"HE HAD THE ILL-GOTTEN JEWEL SET IN A RING AND GAVE IT TO HIS SWEETHEART ON THEIR WEDDING DAY."
AND TWO MINUTES LATER, SOMETHING HAPPENED TOO TERRIBLE TO TELL!
GO ON! GO ON!

WHY, NO... THE BIG ONE'S FOR THE MILK, AND THE LITTLE ONE'S FOR THE CREAM.

Straus Hails First Victory In Slum War

Cites Opening of Four Low-Rent Projects As U. S. Thiumph

Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, yesterday hailed opening of low-rent projects in four cities as proof that the American people can win independence from the tyranny of slums.

Straus spoke over the NBC Red Network to celebrate opening of projects in New York City, Buffalo, Austin, Tex., and Jacksonville, Fla.

The housing administrator blamed slums for "gaping holes in public treasuries and private pocketbooks, sordid ugliness in the fabric of our cities and the broken health nad warped lives of thousands of citizens."

Both local authority and private building lost the fight against the slum, Straus said, through no fault of their own while the first three years of national effort fell short of success. Three years study, however, he said, led to the present housing act.

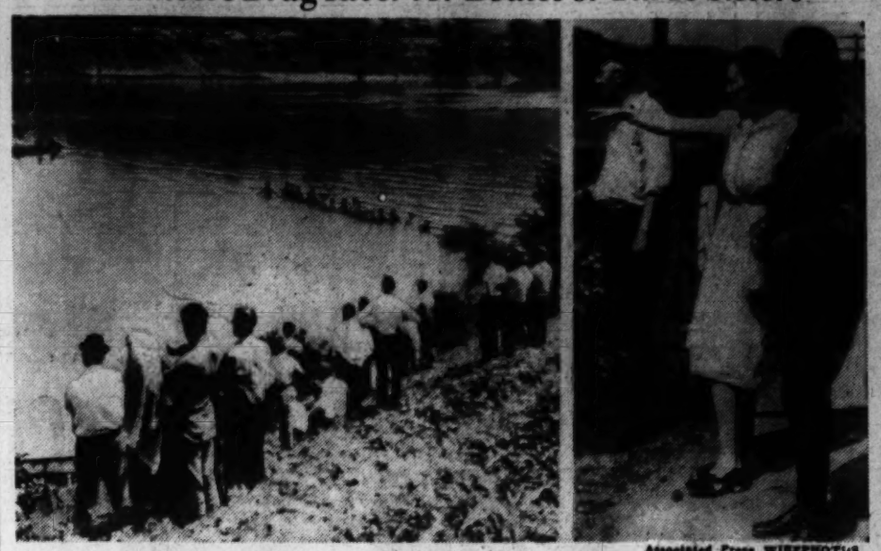
"Today we celebrate the first victory in our Nation-wide war against the slum," Straus continued. "A few hundred low-rent families have already left the shanties and tenements . . . Within the next few years, with funds to be made available under legislation now pending in Congress, more than 400,000 families, more than 1,500,000 human beings, will follow . . .

"A year ago there were those who said 'It just can't be done.' Today we have proved that it can be done.

"The fathers of this Republic declared that all human beings were endowed with certain inalienable rights. Among those rights, we now realize, is the right to live in dwellings that are fit for free men and free women."

The new homes, Straus said, were built to last 60 years and rent for $3.60 to $17 a month.

Volunteers Drag River for Bodies of Three Sisters



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

As the Nation counted its violent death toll from the four-day holiday, volunteers at West Newton, Pa., dragged elbow to elbow through the Youghiogheny River for the bodies of the three Mirella sisters who, unable to swim, linked their arms together and jumped into the swollen river Sunday when their small boat began to sink. Right, Miss Margaret Skrjanc, who managed to pull herself to safety, is showing directors of the search where the boat overturned.

Amateur Actors Asked to C. U. Trials

Amateurs were invited yesterday by the speech and drama department of Catholic University to try out tonight for parts in the play, "The Comedian," which will be presented at the university August 7, and the Sylvan Theater August 8.
